With regard to the question of the war in Europe, it cannot be contested "wealth and intelligence" the most formidable of belligerents, yet he endeavored to all costs and by every means short of open armed rebellion. The drop and deadly color-line was drawn, and the great problem of our political history was complicated death ever.

The low medical dress order has called forth severe criticism from the Catholic hierarchy of Quebec. Archbishop Taschereau on Sunday refused to the order to his consent, while the bishop of Sherbrooke, the acting bishop of Montreal, has nothing to add to the order of the Dominion Minister of Marine, congratulating the Catholic publication of an article denouncing the order. The bishop says: "I must that the order respecting low-necked dresses will be allowed to remain a dead letter, at least so far as our French-Canadian ladies are concerned. In ignoring it they will not stand lower in the esteem of men, and certainly not on the eyes of God, who admirably recognizes under the English mode our fashion to count or elsewhere.

The Hartford correspondent of the London News tells this story of the Earl of Dufferin, which will account in no small degree for the popularity of the ex-governor general of Canada.

I once asked a devoted mother what she thought of Lord Dufferin. She straightway told me she had only seen him twice. The first time she had with her one of her beloved children, the daughter of whom so dearly she shared with Lord Dufferin for a brief too minutes. Two years later the two meetings occurred in the Rideau Canal, the child fell into the water, and the governor-general, at the risk of his life, rushed to the rescue and saved the child. Why, he never thought of it, I suppose, but it was the thing, he never hesitated, he never thought of the risk, he never thought of the consequences, he never thought of the public, he never thought of himself, he never thought of anything but the child and its mother. Of course, he did not do it for popularity, he did it because he was a man, and because he was a man he could do no other. Of course, he did it because he was a man, and because he was a man he could do no other. Of course, he did it because he was a man, and because he was a man he could do no other. Of course
