Niles' Weekly Register.
THIS work was commenced at Baltimore in Sept. 1811, and is still published there, at five dollars per annum, payable in advance. Of the character of the REGISTER, which has been so long before the public, it is superfluous to speak. It was designed, at once to be a faithful representative of political facts and a watchful guardian of the rights of the people, without prejudice or partiality as to persons. How far it has succeeded is not for the editor to determine. He has only to say, that it shall continue to be published on its original principles with fearless perseverance, and that it never shall be rendered subservient to the individual preform or personal abuse of any man.
The ensuing session of congress will be one of more than ordinary interest. It is expected that some private business of the editor, totally unconnected with public men or political measures, will render it necessary for him to be much at Washington during the session, and he will, thereby, be enabled, to present his readers with a nearer view of what shall be transacted than has heretofore been given in this work, that the people may the better know what their servants are doing or leaving undone. In representing facts, no consultation will be held with fear or bargain made with expediency.
The subscription to the REGISTER is one of the largest in the United States, but there is ample room for additions to it; and the editor respectfully requests his friends to increase his means of being useful, by extending the circulation of his work.
As the current volume commenced on the first of September, ultimo, it is best that new subscribers should begin at that time, and the back numbers will be furnished, that they may have a perfect work so long as they continue. Complete sets, 24 vols. may be had. Including the General Index, and all the extra supplements, the price is seventy dollars, 12 sheets, folded and collected in volumes.
The safety of the mails, when money is enclosed in letters to the editor, is guaranteed. Address
H. NILES, Baltimore.
