A joint effort by BAYSIDE Precinct police and school principals to make the streets safer will get a huge boost with the opening of a $4,000 substation connected to a regional alarm center.

The new police substation will be located at 12-18 84th street, FLUSHING, a site chosen because of the high level of crime in the area.

The substation will be staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and will be equipped with state-of-the-art technology to monitor and respond to emergency calls.

The regional alarm center, which will provide dispatching and communication services for the substation, is located at 36-06 36th avenue, BAYSIDE.

The alarm center was opened last year to improve response times and coordination between police departments.

The joint effort by the police and school principals is part of a broader initiative to enhance community safety in the area.

The substation will be officially opened on March 15, with a ceremony attended by local elected officials and representatives from the alarm center.

The new facility is expected to reduce response times and improve the overall effectiveness of the police department in the area.

The substation and alarm center are part of a larger effort by the city to invest in public safety infrastructure.

The new police substation and alarm center are examples of the city's commitment to enhancing community safety and improving the quality of life for residents in the area.
