The Sleeping Sorrow.

I have a sorrow dwelling
Here deep within my breast
Asleep, but ever ready
To waken from his rest
And when he wakes from slumber,
And when he leaps on me
Oh, then with dark clouds covered
A summer sun I see
Mine eyes upon me fixing
I gaze into them deep—
Wherever soon I turn in
Can he from sleep—
Fast his tear-fringed eyelids
Are closed again in rest
And he sighs in sighing
Asleep within my breast.
How joy in life prevaileth,
How great the power of blue
That sundry is wreath
A sorrow like to this
That life's pure cup of gladness
One grief can scarce destroy
And that a single sadness
But serves to enhance joy

—From the German of Becker.

THE TURKISH WAR.—The truth is at last coming out as to the real results of the battles between the Montenegrins and the Turks at Grahovo, and it appears that the slaughter on both sides was enormous in comparison with the number of troops engaged. The Turks, however, were the greatest sufferers, having lost it is said, at least four thousand men. The cruelties practised by the Montenegrins were more than balanced by those practised by the Turks, so that on this score the least said on either side the better. The people of Western Europe are only astonished that in Europe and not farther away than the eastern shore of the Adriatic such savages still exist.—Paris Letter N. Y. Com. Adv.

☞ In a letter of Daniel Webster's, written in 1852, giving to Prof. Pease his views on the Sabbath and of religion, he introduces a scene at Monticello worthy of the great men of the Republic, from which we take the incident following:

"Many years ago, I spent a Sabbath with Thomas Jefferson at his residence in Virginia.—It was in the month of June, and the weather was delightful. While engaged in discussing the beauties of the Bible, the sound of a bell broke upon our ears, when, turning to the sage of Monticello, I remarked, How sweetly, how very sweetly sounds that Sabbath bell! The distinguished statesman for a moment seemed lost in thought, and then replied: Yes my dear Webster, yes; it melts the heart, it calms the passions, and makes us boys again."

☞ The Gloucester News tells the story of a boy in one of the schools in that town who is an inveterate rhymester, and who laughed one morning during prayers at the sight of a rat. Being asked why he laughed, he replied—

I saw a rat upon the stairs
Coming up to hear your prayers

Being told that he must immediately make another rhyme or be flogged, he quickly answered—

Here I stand before Mas Boodgett
She's going to strike and I shall dodge it and took his seat, the whole school being in a roar of laughter.

WHAT THE GIRLS NEED.—Mrs. Ellis thus hints at the deficiencies of English girls in household knowledge. The cap will fit our American young ladies, except that some of the latter have plenty of "frankness," and do not think it worth while even to show "mock-modesty":

"The truth is, my dear girls, you want generally speaking, more liberty and less fashionable restraint; more kitchen and less parlor; more leg exercise and less sofa; more making puddings and less piano; more frankness and less mock modesty; more breakfast and less bustle."

☞ Fenimore Cooper wrote fiercely and bitterly on his countrymen, and truly, when he said the most ordinary single line of praise of an American author in a British Review was prized as gold; while the most intelligent and elaborate criticism made here at home was despised as dross.

—The steamer Gaiona was destroyed by fire at Red Wing on the Upper Mississippi, last week. Several lives were lost. Four female passengers and two males are reported among the dead by the calamity.

"What Cheer" Hop Yeast Cakes.

DO you like good, sweet, healthy bread?
If so, do you know
1st. Avoid the deleterious powders that are made with soda, saleratus, &c.
2d. Have good flour, and fresh, lively yeast.
3d. Have your bread made at home.
The "What Cheer" Yeast Cakes are made of pure dry hops, will keep in a dry place any length of time, are always sweet and ready for use. The bread is whiter and sweeter than that made with compressed yeast. It makes better biscuits, rolls, cakes, &c. Dissolve one cake in a cup of warm water, add a teaspoonful of sugar, and in a warm place, stir in the morning flour with warm water before baking.
The following is from the Independent of April 15, 1858:
"DOMESTIC BREAD.—Though bakers are a great convenience, especially to persons of small or home made bread is the best product of the pantry. To insure this however, it must be of good flour, good yeast, a good oven, and a good cook. Of these indeed, yeast is the most difficult to be procured in the normal, and hence, one is obliged to vacillate between the strong beer fermentations of brewer's yeast, and some one compounded of soda and saleratus. Happily a preparation has been devised which secures that first requisite of a domestic comfort, sweet and healthy bread. We have made full trial of the "What Cheer" Hop Yeast Cakes, advertised by Mr. Stephen W. Smith, 334 Broadway, and we do not hesitate to say that whoever would have good light bread, and consequently good tempers, good digestion, and good sleep, to start in the morning out of the house, and lay in a supply of the new article."
The Cakes are put up in one dozen packages, and in gross boxes. After trial of a dozen, every family will by economy buy a gross.
The Wholesale Depot is New York City, at 334 Broadway, WM. SMITH, 334 Broadway.
