Tractor Crushes Town of Barker Farm Wife

Story and other picture on Page 1 C

Snow It Goes

With increasing coldness and more snow, it was a quiet, grey, wintry day. The town of Barker Farm was blanketed with a fresh layer of snow. The roads were slippery and the winds howled, making it a typical winter's day.

BINGHAMTON PRESS SUNDAY EDITION

Sunday, February 3, 1957

---

THE SUNDAY PRESS

---

Bennie Stays in Jail Can't Raise $20,000 Bail Set by Judge

Liz Taylor Radiant At Wedding

Naval A.F. Pilots Die in Mishaps

Voices and Events

Salk Vaccine Price-Fixing Probe Asked

Inmates Save Many From Plane

Overloading Dismissed As Factor

Designer, Film Stars Blast Dior’s ‘Spring Look’

Orville P. Hanger was killed when his F-86 jet fighter went down in flames at Hillary Field, Buffalo Air Force Base in Massachusetts.

---

By the Associated Press

Chicago — Edward (Bennie) Bedford, homeless skid row man, was offered his freedom yesterday after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The 32-year-old parolee, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, lived in the street, worked as a laborer, and had been charged with theft.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.

---

Bennie Bedford, 32, of Chicago, was offered his freedom after a 12-year parole delinquency, but he declined to accept it, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Department said. The man, who was sentenced to prison in 1935, had been charged with theft.

---

The police depot was overcrowded with inmates yesterday. The new mayor of Chicago announced that all persons in the city would be able to vote in the next election. The mayor's statement was greeted with approval by the public.