As he started off a great raw-boned fellow ... after him, "Waiter, ... "Yes, sah; what will you have, sah?" The eyes of all were upon the muscular countryman as he drawled forth, "Chawles, Chawles, bring me a small—a vewy small piece of pork—ah—and one bean. Do you understand Chawles?"

Curing a Toothache.

Millions upon millions of thanks are due the discoverer of this, which we clip from the Cincinnati Gazette, if it is only true. For thousands of years toothache has been in the world, ranking as the most decided affliction of mankind, and all this time alum and salt have been ready at hand but with nobody possessed of the genius to apply them. But we know how it is done at last, and henceforth let toothache be banished from the world:

A gentleman says, after suffering excruciating pain from toothache, and having tried ... to obtain relief, Betty told me a gentleman had been waiting sometime in the parlor, who said he would not detain me one minute. He came—a friend I had not seen for years. He sympathized with me, while I briefly told how sadly I was afflicted.

"My dear friend," exclaimed he, "I can cure you in ten minutes."

"How? how?" inquired I; "do it in pity."

"Instantly," said he. "Betty, have you any alum?"

"Yes."

"Bring it, and some common salt."

They were produced; my friend pulverized them, mixed in equal quantities; then wet a small piece of cotton, causing the mixed powders to adhere, and placed it in my hollow tooth.

"There," said he, "if that does not cure you I will forfeit my head. You may tell this to Uatb. and publish it in Askeon; the remedy is infallible."

It was so. I experienced a sensation of coldness on applying it which gradually subsided, and with it the torment of the toothache.

Flies Biting Animals.

For some three or four months of the year our horses, mules, oxen, cows, hogs, etc., are liable to be tormented with flies of different kinds,—such as the ... fly, the ... fly, the green-headed fly, the great horse fly, and, of another family, the ... This fly, it appears, is not in ... when it attacks the horse, ... appear to be to deposit its ... of the horse and, in doing ... its sting. Under the throat ... to be more sensitive than other parts of the horse, and he often becomes unmanageable when this fly attacks that part which should be protected by a bib hung to the throat-strap and tied at the bits.

These animals in their natural, unrestrained condition, may take care of themselves, but when domesticated it is our duty to protect them from these pests, to the rest of our ability. It is shameful that we gear up a horse or mule, and rein them up tightly, and do not provide fly-drivers or use some harmless wash to prevent the flies from biting or worrying them while standing, working or feeding. What a mistake we make in turning our ... out ... during the heat of the day, when the flies are ready to bleed them and, towards evening, when the weather is cooler and they might enjoy it in open fields, they are turned or driven up to the barn ... to beat off the flies till dark. Instead of turning them out late in the morning and bringing them up early in the evening, ... turn them to pasture in the evening and bring them up in the morning and let them stand or lie ... during the heat of the day. ... should surely find our account in this course.—From Our Dumb Animals.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

However obscure the cause may be which contributes to render nervous debility a disease so prevalent, affecting as it does, nearly one half of our adult population, it is a melancholy fact that day by day, and year by year, we witness a most frightful increase of nervous affections from the slightest neuralgia to the more grave and extreme forms of Nervous Prostration.

It is of the highest importance, then, that individuals should be able to judge for themselves by their own feelings, if and to what extent they are attacked by this insidious enemy to health, comfort and even life itself if left to run its course unchecked by the early and prompt application of curative remedies.

Nervous Debility

is characterized by a general languor or weakness of the whole organism, especially of the nervous system, obstructing and preventing the ordinary functions of nature; hence, there is a disordered state of the secretions; constipation, scanty and high colored urine, with an excess of earthy or limey sediment indicative of waste of the brain and nerve substance, frequent palpitations of the heart, loss of memory, and marked irresolution of purpose, and inability to carry into action any well defined business enterprise, or to fix the mind upon any one thing any length of time. There is a great sensitiveness to impressions, though retained but a short time, with a flickering and fluttering condition of the mental faculties, rendering an individual what is commonly called a whiffle-minder or fickle-minded man. There must of necessity be in each individual different symptoms, according to his peculiar organization, habits, pursuits and temperament, which all serve to shape the manner of manifestation of their nervous disturbances, constituting a difference as marked as are their physical peculiarities dissimilar and peculiar to themselves. These differences, in the manner and form of their manifestation, do not indicate any necessary difference to be followed in the treatment of any case, where disease has its origin in physical injury; the same remedies being alike applicable to the weak as the strong; to the sturdy as to the sickly, varied only in degree of quantity and duration in the use of them in order to overcome the disease. Nervous debility, or what is generally regarded as such, is as certain a typical in the peculiarities as are the dreams of the shipwrecked mariner, who, in his struggles for safety, lies down exhausted for a moment's sleep upon the wreck upon which he floats, with all the elements of destruction in mad commotion around him, when the first instincts of his nature are a longing for something solid upon which he may find a standing place.

In some cases of the disease there are paroxysmal exacerbations, with extreme debility apparent in everything; often conditions of hectic in all its stages; also all the general symptoms enumerated, with a local manifestation of it more frequently apparent in the facial nerves, though it may be in any other part of the body, such as the thorax, abdomen or limbs, with pains of a shooting, lancinating character. For this condition an explanation is found in the fact that, as the vitality of a nerve structure decreases by age, over-exertion or too frequent excitement, at improper time, its nervous sensibility increases; and if the diminution is the result of irritation, as by disease or local injury, there is a general decrease of vital stamina or power; the least shock or irritation may act as a secondary cause, the inherent or primary cause being some one or all of those already mentioned. In causation, however, there are a great many others on such as scrofula, malaria, blood and wasting diseases of all kinds, fevers, sexual excesses, and the many forms of vice and all chronic diseases, where there is irritation; this, being reflected to the spinal marrow, produces a depression of that great nervous centre, from whence a corresponding degree of nervous debility is distributed to all parts of the system; a weakened condition follows, impeding, obstructing and paralysing the functional operations of every organ, muscular and mental, necessary to carry on the essential duties, business or pleasures of existence.

This condition of the individual, distressing as it is, may, with certainty, be cured by Recent Testimonials.

FARMERSVILLE, Nov. 19, 1874.

I have used the Cordial Balm and Syricum and Lothorp's Tonic Pills as a preventive and cure for the use of ardent spirits and habitual intoxication, and find them actually specific in such cases. I regard them as most invaluable medicines, and nothing could induce me without them.

JAMES MESERVE.

TIFTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

We take great pleasure in informing you of the surprisingly beneficial results from the use of your English Remedy. The Cordial Balm of Syricum and Lothorp's Tonic Pills in a case of great Nervous Debility and Prostration, by a member of our family who had been under treatment by different doctors for nearly three years past without any apparent benefit therefrom; but your medicine has produced a most wonderful change for the better, and the patient now enjoys comparatively excellent health.
