Reconciliation.

Dear heart,
We cannot let another day
Of discord steal our life away;
The evil eidolon must fly
That would keep you and I
Apart.

Alas!
That we should so the time abuse
Which love can ill afford to lose!
The dole of sweet days is so small,
We should have tithe of all
That pass.

And yet,
Now that the wayward tempest-mood
With night has flown, and have renewed
With joy and freshness wakes again,
Regret.

Once more
In those wild eyes, meek wounded dove
I see the quivering light of love
Returning dear and doubly dear,
Yes, pride and coldness drear
Are o'er.

Farewell,
Thou dear disunion, like an isle
Where parted waters meet and smile.
It was a time of doubt and pain,
But love is found again,
Farewell.

Malaria in the South.

The Mississippi River drains the greater part of the United States between the Allegheny and the Rocky Mountains, and the whole of this vast territory is exceedingly fertile and capable of producing an infinite variety of crops, including every product of both temperate and tropical climes. Yet this region, so favored by nature, if not a "howling" wilderness, is still almost wholly untilled and uninhabited, especially that portion of it lying south of Kentucky.

Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, south ere Missouri and Louisiana are capable, under proper cultivation, of producing crops of cotton, sugar, tobacco, sweet potatoes and corn, that would prove as profitable as the gold and silver mines of Colorado. But this whole region labors under the terrible blight of malaria. The malaria emanates from decomposing organic matter, producing intermitting, remitting and other diseases. Miasmatic poison is not cognizable by the senses, nor can it be detected by chemical tests; it is known only by its effects. The concurrence of vegetable matter susceptible of decay, of moisture either on the surface or a short distance below it, and of a certain elevation of temperature, are necessary for its evolution. Long continued heat has the greatest influence in increasing the intensity to the poison. Comparatively harmless in the northern part of the temperate zone, it becomes malignant and deadly in places equally favorable to its production just in proportion to the increase in the mean annual temperature. Marshes, whether salt or fresh, and wet meadows, are especially subject to malaria, particularly when drying under a hot sun. Ground alternately flooded and drained is a fertile source, and it is this which renders the cultivation of rice so deleterious. Ground which retains the moisture a short distance below the surface, though that may be dry and parched, is favorable to the production of malaria. And it is only in warm climates that its full effects upon the constitution are observed.

It is argued and with considerable show of reason, that the terrible yellow fever epidemic at Memphis and New Orleans are largely produced by the miasmatic influence of the atmosphere, which is tainted with the odors of decaying vegetation of thousands of acres. It remains, then, to show the cause of this evil, which is much greater in extent now than it was twenty years ago, and to see if there is not a remedy, either natural or artificial which may be provided.

The portion of the country lying along the river banks is exceedingly rich. Now, remembering that the hot rays of the sun are necessary to the development of malaria, it should be borne in mind that rich soil becomes more gradual than sandy soil, but at last reaches a higher temperature. It is to be remembered that surfaces which absorb heat rays quickly also give them off quickly, while the surface of a field which gradually takes in the sun's rays during the day will also slowly and gradually give them off during the night. Thus it will be seen that the rich bottom lands of the Mississippi are reeking with miasmatic poison during the summer months.

Water filters the rough soil with very different degrees of rapidity. The same measured quantity of water will run through the same depth of heavy cotton soil in seventy-four minutes, while in pinewood soil it makes the passage in thirteen minutes, and in sand in nine and a half minutes. This fact should be considered in connection with the subject.

Any one who will take a trip up the Mississippi River from New Orleans to Memphis will observe hundreds of deserted plantations which once flourished under a system of liberal cultivation. Their abandonment involves the neglect of thousands of acres, which are now a fruitful source of vegetable decay, and, what is of more importance, a valuable system of drainage that was once kept in most excellent order, is now utterly ruined. Hundreds of fertile fields that once produced valuable crops every year are now inundated by every unusual rise of the river, and germinate the seeds of death instead of their old-time abundant harvests.

Immigration, cultivation and drainage are the only implements that will eliminate this accursed blight and thousands of lives will be sacrificed even before this is accomplished. The time will come when this malaria blighted territory will be the garden of America.

A Wedding in Wyoming.

Camping near the town, we secured our stock and then went in. Entering the leading store, I introduced myself to Mr. Stiles, one of the proprietors and the postmaster.

"It is now half-past 2 and at 3 there's to be a wedding down the street at Jonas Burton's. Old Jonas is a rough old coon that we elected Justice of the Peace about a month ago, and, as this will be his first attempt at a marriage, I think we will see some fun. Come and go down with me."

We went to the old 'Squire's cabin. We found him pouring over a large volume of the statutes of Wyoming, sweating like a horse and looking terribly anxious. After greeting us he said:

"Stiles, the durned galoots thet got up these 'yer laws hadn't gumption enough to last 'em over night. I've run through the blamed book a half a dozen times, an' can't find a dod blasted word about metermony, or how the hitchin' process is preceeded with. I've just got to put the clamps on this couple, hit or miss, an' ef I don't yoke 'em up legal I can't help it."

"Oh!" said Stiles, "just do the best you can. Any kind of a ceremony will do in this country, for people'll never question the legality of the thing. I'll post you as well as I can."

Stiles then explained to him about how he should proceed, and the old man finally thought he could worry through in tollerable shape. Ere long the couple appeared, followed by a crowd of the citizens of the camp. The candidates stood up before the 'Squire, who began:

"Feller citizens, this 'yar man an' this 'yar woman have appeared before the court to be hitched in the legal bands of wedlock. If any galoot in the mob know of anything that mout block the game ef took to a higher court, let him now toot his bazoo, or else keep his jaw to himself now and forevermore. All in favor o' me perceedin' as authorized by the law, say 'I.'"

Everybody said "I."

"Contrary, 'no.'"

Nobody said "no."

"The motion's carried unanimously, an' the Court rules that thar hain't nuthin' to prevent the tryin of the case. Grip your fins."

The candidates joined hands. "Amos Peabody, do you solemnly sw'ar that you'll freeze to 'Mandy forever and ever? That you'll love 'er, an' pervide fur 'er, an' treat 'er squar an' white, accordin' to the rules an' regulations sot down to govern sich cases in the laws of the United States, so help yer God?"

"Yaas, sir; I do, sir."

"That fixes your end o' the bargain. Mandy Thomas, do you solemnly sw'ar that you'll hang on to Amos for all comin' time, that you'll nuss him in sickness an' be squar to him in wellness, that ye'll always be to him a good, true, honest, up-an'-up wife under the penalties prescribed by the laws for the punishment of sich offenses; do you swa'ar to this, so help yer God?"

"I swa'ar I will."

"Then by the power in me vested as Justice o' the Peace, in an' fur this precinct, I pronounce you, Amos Peabody, husband, an' you 'Mandy Thomas, wife, and legalize ye to remain as sich now an' furevermore, an, ye'll stand committed till the fees an' costs in the case be paid in full, an' may God have mercy on your soul an' bless this union with His heftiest blessings."

The fees and costs were adjusted, and, after receiving the congratulations of the assembly, the newly made husband and wife departed for their cabin up the creek.

A German Machine.

An ingenious German doctor has invented an apparatus which is designed to supercede the guillotine, the gibbet and all other means of inflicting the death penalty. In the middle of an apartment specially arranged for executions stands an allegorical statue of Justice holding a sword in one hand and a pair of scales in the other. Directly in front of the statue is placed, an arm-chair for the condemned. After reading the death sentence the Judge, who is also invested with the functions of executioner, casts a judicial staff which he holds in one of his hands into one of the scales, which immediately descends and at the same instant the condemned man falls dead through the operation of a powerful electric battery concealed in the statue and connected with the arm-chair. Experiments with this machine have been tried on an ox, a horse and two dogs, who were immediately exterminated, as was also an unwary magistrate who was assisting in the experiment and who incautiously approached too near the fatal arm-chair.

His Experience.

A Chicago man says: "I ran for office once—when I was young and foolish. I got defeated, and am glad of it. I'd rather be a 'yellow hound' and bay a moon made of green cheese than submit myself again to the crucifixion, button-holing, lying, sneaking, double dealing, back-biting, whispering, conniving, rotgut swilling, hand-shaking, foul breathing, make-believe friendship and bare-faced treachery that must befall every man that runs for an office—falsely said to be in "the gift of the people"—in any great city. In the gift of the devil would hit nearer the mark.

Certain Knowledge.

We know whereof we affirm when we say that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver cure has performed more wonderful cures than any medicine ever brought before the American people.

Shopping with a Woman.

Did you ever go shopping with a woman? It is very interesting to a man. It does not make much difference what is to be purchased, the process is about the same. For instance, Mrs Buyer wants a small rug, so she takes Mr Buyer along as stakeholder, so to speak. Mrs B, having been placed in charge of a gentlemanly clerk, (it is singular, but they all are gentlemany—in the newspapers, and this clerk has got to have a fair show,) and states that she would like to see some rugs. The g. c., affected more or less, by the affluent appearance of his customer, smiles a waxed-mustache-and-hair-parted-in-the-middle smile, and proceeds to cover the floor with Turkish rugs of gorgeous dye and beautiful to behold. Mrs B, examines prices, and exclaims on their beauty, and then remarks, with a sigh, that she wanted something not quite so expensive. Then the English felt beauties are exhibted, and the same program gone through. Mrs. B, quietly suggests that she would like to look at the linen stuff, and several bolts of linen of various sizes, styles and patterns are spread out to be examined and priced. All this time Mr B, stands around in awe and astonishment, noting the changes on the countenance of the clerk, the glimmer of hope and despair, as Mrs B's eyes notes some matting and she goes off at a tangent to make a raid on it. After satisfying herself as to the price of straw, and making a mental calculation of the effect of the drouth, and failure of crops on prices, she innocently wonders whether there are any cheap carpet rugs in stock, and the g. c., goes like a martyr to the stake, to lay out the cheaper goods. Mr B, after standing first on one foot then on the other, until both are tired, brightens up at this, thinking that at last the end is reached, but, vain hope, his heart sinks within him as he sees her switch off to a pile of remnants. These she examines and prices, debates whether a rug made of certain pieces would not be pretty, and finally concludes that she will go elsewhere, and if she don't get what she wants she may come back and buy one of those pieces. Then she retires with Mr B, leaving the woe begone clerk the picture of disgust.

"You worried that clerk out, anyway," remarked Mr B, as they moved away.

"Oh, no, I didn't" she replied, "they have to get used to that."

"But why did'nt you buy something?

"Why, I didn't see anything that suited me; I don't know that I shall get a rug any way." and Mrs B. stopped at another place to price linen, while Mr B, mentally quoted: "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of her countrymen."

Another Snake Story.

Wilkins, of the Whitehall Times, tells a story of some pet snakes which rocked a baby to sleep while another sat on a chair and fanned her with a fan held in its tail, and the editor of the Rome Sentinel seems to think that it cannot be beaten. But that is nothing to an incident that happened in Westchester county not long ago. A little girl of three years had discovered a nest of rattlesnakes which she used to feed until they became very much attached to her. One day as she was feeding the snakes a bull which was grazing in an adjoining lot discovered her, and came rushing at her with head lowered. The little girl was so frightened that she did not know what to do, but the two largest snakes immediately took their tails in their mouths, so as to form a circle. Two more snakes then placed themselves across each of the circles formed by the two larger snakes, so as to represent the spokes of the wheels, of which the other two formed the rims. Another snake then coiled itself around the child, and with its tail coiled around the two snakes that formed the spokes of one of the wheels, where they crossed at the centre, and its neck around the ones that formed the spokes of the other, formed a carriage of two wheels, with the girl between. The wheels immediately began to turn, and in less time than it takes to tell it they had landed the girl safely at her door far ahead of the bull, and returned to their nest. We are not noted for our veracity, but if anyone who is inclined to doubt the truth of this story, we will prove it to his entire satisfaction and give him a first-class obituary notice besides, if he will call at our office. A Patriarch.

Writes: "With a firm steady hand (not a trembling one) though my age is nearly eighty, I give my tesimony to the value of Burdock Blood Bitters; for twenty years I have suffered tortures indescribable through dyspepsia, indigestion and constipation. I tried hundreds of remedies, but all was money thrown away until I tried your bitters. I give Burdock Blood Bitters the credit for making me strong and hearty." Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

In a Young Ladies Shoe.

Last Sunday, after Miss Ida Peteet had returned from church, she stepped into her room to exchange her shoes for a more comfortable pair. When she put her foot into the shoe that had been left at home she found it occupied by a snake. She gave a scream and her father ran to her assistance. He picked up the shoe and tried to shake the reptile out, but it popped out its head, causing him to drop the shoe instanter. He then kicked the shoe and all into the yard and finally succeeded in ousting the trespasser, which proved to be a greand rattlesnake more than twelve inches in length. It suffered death. [Little Rock Gazette.

Heat Without Fire.

A machine has been invented in Boston for generating heat without fire. It is simply an iron cylinder about a foot long and a foot in diameter. The bottom of the cylinder is a hardened plate upon which another plate of the same diameter turns, the pressure being regulated by a screw, according to the power that is to be applied and the amount of heat desired. All of the space not taken up by the wheel and shaft is filled with water. As soon as the wheel is set in motion the water is brought up to a high temperature and the cylinder becomes a stove, which radiates heat from the whole of its exterior surface. Of course this machine can only be used in buildings where there is steam power that can be availed of to run the friction wheel. There is entire security against accident by fire, which is a strong point in favor of the friction heater.

When a lecturer has worked the ladies of his audience so near to the weeping point that they have gotten out their handkerchiefs, and then suddenly changes his tone and speaks of the merits of Dr Bulls Cough Syrup, he is bound to rouse a feeling of indignation.

Office Holding.

Of all occupations office holding is the most precarious and the least satisfactory. To be at the mercy at the whim or caprices of a politician, himself the creature of a superior, is to be in purgatory. But a few offices pay well. The work as a rule is not hard, lazy habits are engendered, dissimulation and treachery are apt to be developed, sturdy independence is undermined, and un-American ideas are sown in fallow soil. To professional politicians the life of an office holder has charms. To men at the top of the ladder comes power and influence; but to the ordinary, dependent subordinate there is a wearing restlessness which is burdened often with disappointment, and is never free from uncertainty and apprehension. Unless a man gives an honest day's work he has no right to a fair day's pay, and the fact is that quite one half of the office holders of to-day do very little labor and that grudgingly.

Brother Gardner's Latest Remarks.

"I has always took notiss," began the old man, "dat it trubbles a man's conscience fur mo' to admit a mistake dan it does to commit half a dozen fresh ones. A few weeks ago I put myself on record as supportin' de Rev. Jasper, of Virginny, in assertion dat de sun do move, an' to strengthen de posishun I called attenshun to de fact dat Joshua commanded de sun to stan' still. If de sun wasn't gwine what did he ax her to stop fur? But I made a slip, an' I'ze gwine to admit it. 'Long comes a letter from de Reverends Hookem an' Porter, of New Hampshire, axin' me if de sun didn't stop when told to, an' if de world did'nt begin right dar to move aroun' it. I kin find in my Bible whar Joshua commanded her to stop, but nowhar' kin I find whether it obeyed or not. Maybe she did. If so, den Jasper an' myself am floored. It am a side of de queshun dat had nebbur occurred to me befo', an' my faith am a good deal shaken. Until sich time as I kin satisfy myself on dis p'int I wish to be recorded as on de fence on de sun queshun."

Expedition Brown said he was in need of advice. He was a member of the church, and believed himself a Christian man. He lived beside a man who throw melon rinds and other truck over the line fence, and laughed at all protests. This neighbor had also poisoned his dog, chased away his cat and taught the boys in the neighborhood to sing:

Old Expedition Brown, he
Is lame and is lazy;
An' his dog has kicked de bucket
An' his wife am almost crazy.

He wanted to know whether he should ask protection from the police, or grin and bear it.

"Neither one," answered the President. "I know you to be a Christian and a good man, an' I say to you dat de warry nex' time dat naybur interferes wid you, walk out an' tackle him. A man who doan' respect de law, an' de right way to win his esteem am to knock him down." [Detroit Free Press.

Babies at a Premium.

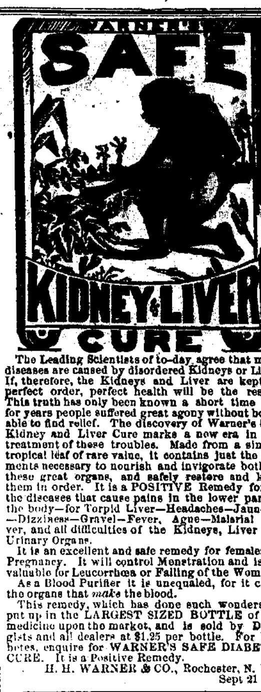
In the early days of California, women and babies were extremely rare, and one night at the theatre in San Francisco when a baby set up a cry during the orchestra an excited miner rose in the gallery and yelled:

"Stop them fiddles and let the baby cry. I haven't heard such a sound before in ten years."

Judging by a scene at Tucson, A. T. a Sunday or two ago there is as great a dearth of babies there as in the younger days of San Francisco. Colonel Deane found a richly dressed Mexican baby lying on the grass, evidently abandoned by its mother, and crying at the top of its voice. He laid claim to it and was soon surrounded by persons anxious for the prize. A Mexican lady offered $20 for it. An American lady $50. A hundred others wanted the baby raffled off, declaring their readiness to take tickets at any price. But the Colonel concluded to adopt the baby himself, and did so at the expense of being denounced as a selfish man who would give none of his fellow mortals a chance.

Kidney Complaint Cured.

B. Turner, Rochester, N. Y., writes: "I have been for over a year subject to serious disorder of the kidneys, and often unable to attend to business; I procured your Burdock Blood Bitters, and was relieved before half a bottle was used. I intend to continue, as I feel confident that they will entirely cure me." Price $1.00, size 10 cent.



The Leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial Fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females in Pregnancy. It will control Menstration and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb.

As a Blood Purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.
