The Real Mother-In-Law.

Who was it, when I wed my wife,
Wished me a long and happy life
From trouble free, unvexed by strife?
My mother in-law.

Who was it taught my wife to bake
A loaf of bread or fancy cake,
And appetizing dishes make?
My mother in-law.

Who gave us counsel when we went
Housekeeping, money freely spent.
On things for use and ornament?
My mother-in-law.

Who taught my wife to take delight
In making all around her bright,
And meet me with a smile at night?
My mother-in law.

Who was it, when my wife was ill,
Bestowed upon her care, and skill,
And saved to me a nurse's bill?
My mother-in-law.

Who then my little ones prepared
Each morn for school, who for them cared,
And all their little sorrows shared?
My mother-in-law.

Who was it, when their prayers were said,
So snugly tucked them into bed
And, till they slept, beside them stayed?
My mother-in law.

Who of my clothing then took care?
Who overlooked my underwear,
And kept each garment in repair?
My mother-in-law,

Who comes the first to soothe my woes?
Who loves my friends and hates my foes?
Who buys my children lots of clothes?
My mother-in-law

A loving grandmother is she,
A generous friend she's been to me,
Forever honored let her be,
my mother-in-law.

Bad for a Bashful Bachelor.

A bachelor tried to carve a goose,
In vain!
He could not find a thigh bone loose,
'Twas plain ;
He stuck a fork in the creature's breast,
And the gravy spurted over his vest,
The guests all smiled like seraphs blest
Again.

The carver's face was red and white,
Indeed ;
He sawed away, if that he might
Succeed ;
His collar parted with a snap,
His coat-tail flapped with many a flap,
The goose slipped in the hostess' lap,
With speed. —Philadelphia News

All disorders caused by a bilious state of the system can be cured by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. No pain, griping or discomfort attending their use. Try them.

THE PROPER THING.

Velvet and moire petticoats or balmorals now rival those of satin.

Jersey wool corset covers are now worn by those who desire extra warmth.

Young ladies' party dresses are made just long enough to touch the floor.

The pretty fashion of making lace gowns over a color is a fashion which holds its popularity.

Polonaises cut in one piece are quite popular. The plaits are held at the waist with a belt of steel or jet.

In flower pins, a single blossom upon a big leaf enamelled in the natural color, is the most attractive new fancy.

Angora sheep furnish the nicest of boas and muffs. The white, fleecy fur, is also used in trimming evening wraps.

Chamois-skin vest to be worn either under the dress or else between the cloak and dress are covered with checked silk.

Fashion now requires the lady to exchange rings with her fiance, and the correct one for the purpose is of heavy gold, with a single stone set flush.

A new arrangement of ribbon upon plain bonnets instead of the standing loops so long in vogue, is to gather or pleat it along the edge and place it back and forth three or four times from the brim to the top of the crown.

The Connemera cloak is one of the prettiest among the new cloaks. The yoke is of plush or velvet on which is sewed in gathered plaids the fullness of the skirt. A gathering at the waist line in the back gives a pretty curve over the bustle.

Simple Velvet bonnets are made with low crowns and have very decided puffing at the back; but are smooth upon the brim. The only trimming is an alsatian bow of four-inch ribbon, tightly strapped and placed far back on the crown.

Wide Awake 1888.

The readers of this wonderful magazine for young people are so accustomed to good reading and pictures that they will wonder how it is going to be better than ever this year. But it is. The new year has already begun with the holiday number, larger and richer, more varied, and therefore it must be better than ever before. And the publishers have a primer to send to those who want to know what Wide Awake is going to have in it in 1888.

The wonder is that such a library and picture gallery can be got together for $2.40 a year—a thousand pages and every thing fresh and new—stories, history, travels, biography, sketches, anecdote, adventure—and all instructive as well as entertaining. Two worlds are drawn from to make such provision for the education and pleasure of our children. [illegible]

A CURIOUS DISCOVERY.

The Sensation Created by a Japanese Peasant Woman.

A young Japanese peasant woman has created a genuine sensation in the medical circles of the east with a new theory and cure of rheumatism.

Her theory is that it is caused by a small insect under the skin, that knaws and bites the muscles and thus causes the twinges of pain and the untold misery of that ailment.

A grizzled and skeptical sea captain placed himself under her care and, after foot baths of bran and hot rice brandy, she nipped from his knees small white insects by the dozen!

The regular practitioners were skeptical about this new theory, and put one of the insects under a microscope. They decided that by its organism it never could have lived under the surface of the skin.

The Captain insists, however, that the Japanese woman has taken the insects from his knees and ankles by the hundreds, in his sight, and killed them, and that he grows better after each treatment!

This theory absurd as it seems, is really not much more so than the theories formerly held by the medical fraternity. It used to be thought a trouble of the joints, and was treated as such until it was demonstrated that the treatment brought no lasting results.

Then, as the muscles were affected, it was set down as a muscular disease; but the same unsatisfactory results followed. Now it is universally acknowledged to be a "fiery condition of the blood caused by the presence of uric acid in the system."

To cure it the uric acid must be driven out of the blood, which is done by putting the kidneys in a healthy condition with Warner's safe cure, and "putting out the fire in the blood" by Warner's safe rheumatic cure. These remedies, taken in alternation, as they should be, drive out the uric acid already in the blood, and prevents further accumulation. James Wight, of 37 E. 19th St., New York, was for many years a victim of rheumatism, and tried various remedies and cures without avail. Sept. 8, 1887, he writes in praise of the remedies named, and says: "I am now free from the arrow stings of the dreaded inflammatory rheumatism. I have and always will recommend Warner's rheumatic remedies to all sufferers of the disease."

The Japanese peasant woman's theory will not be likely to stand the test of time and scientific investigation, but the thousands of cures made by the remedies mentioned above prove their merit beyond all question.

NATURAL GAS.

Unfounded Fears Regarding Its Use.

There are 18 natural gas companies at Pittsburg, with 230 wells, 900 miles of gas pipes, supplying 30,000 consumers in Pittsburg and Alleghany. The consumption is over 600,000,000 cubic feet daily.

We are told that dreadful consequences are likely to follow the American enterprise of boring for natural gas; that in China the Lake Foo-Chang rests upon a district that was blown up and all its inhabitants destroyed, and that the same catastrophe is imminent in the United States unless the laws restrict further developments in the boring of so many wells. The correspondent who sounds this note of alarm says: "Should an explosion occur there will be such an upheaval as will dwarf the most terrible of earthquakes ever known. The country along the gas belt from Toledo through Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky will be ripped up to a depth of from 1200 to 1500 feet, and flopped over like a pancake, leaving a chasm though which the waters of Lake Erie will come howling down, filling the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, and blotting them out forever." This is very startling, and to many may appear very plausible, seeing that the quantity of gas that sometimes rushes forth when these wells are opened is so enormous. Those, however, who have made practical experiments in exploding such gases will not be prevented from settling in the Ohio or Missippi valley.

Lectures, who have often shown the old popular experiment of the electrical pistol, will especially appreciate our meaning. This is a tube through which an electric spark may be passed into a mixture of coal gas and atmospheric air. The usual mode of showing the experiment is to hold the tube over the gas jet for a few seconds, then cork it and pass the spark. It should explode and shoot out the cork, but very frequently fails, and why? Simply because it contains too much gas. The lecturer, in such cases removes the cork, blows down the tube, or otherwise removes some of the gas, and introduces air in its place, then tries it again, and bang it goes. The fact is that a tube, a borehole, a gaspipe, a gasholder, a cavern or coal mine filled or nearly filled with hydro carbon gas is perfectly inexplosive. If half filled with such gas it will not explode. Even at the present day the majority of those who pass the great gasholders ("gasometers" as they are miscalled) of our gasworks imagine that a terrible explosion would occur if a light reached their contents. The fact is that if a flaming torch were plunged into one of them when filled with gas the torch would be instantly extinguished, and the gas issuing from the hole through which the torch was thrown would simply burn in the air, but not in the holder.

SOUTHERN DECAY.

Huts and Small Farms Succeed Mansions and Plantations.

A great many of the plantations in different parts of the south, which were once well known for their size, the magnificence of the residences upon them, the hospitality of their owners or on ac of the prominence of the families which possessed them, are now falling into ruins. The reason of this is, perhaps, that the land has been worked so long without being fertilized that it has become poor, or it may be that those into whose possession it has passed lack the energy and skill which are required to make it pay under the present system of labor. One of these famous old places, in Liberty county in this state, was lately sold to a colored man for $2,500, only a part of the purchase price being required at once. It is known as Laurel View, and is within two miles of the historic town of Sunbury. It was the home of the gifted John Elliot, and a very beautiful home it was. John Elliot represented Georgia in the United States senate from 1820 to 1826.

The plantation contains 2,800 acres. It was purchased during the war of secession by Linton Stephens, a brother of Alexander H. Stephens, and was sold to the present owner by his heirs.

The district in which the plantation is situated was noted, from the first settlement of the state until the emancipation of the slaves, for the intelligence and wealth of its citizens. It is now, however, almost wholly abandoned to the colored people. Its great plantations have been divided into small farms, and the superb mansions, once the homes of men noted for wealth and culture, and of women famous for beauty and refinement, are falling into decay, and are being replaced by cabins and huts, whose chimneys of sticks and mud tell more plainly than words of the marvelous change for the worse which has taken place in the once rich and prosperous district.—Savannah News.

Severe diseases are frequently induced by neglect of proper attention to their beginnings. Laxador will check the beginning of diseases.

What Mrs. Grundy Says.

That there was never a time so prolific of humbug in the name of art as at present.

That the sacrifices some people make for fashion and style are almost beyond belief.

That quite a number of hotels would seem to be little better than colossal drinking places.

That some of the men who have written books are a great bore and nuisance in society.

That cruelty to children is by no means confined to the poor, the ignorant or the vicious.

That the multiplicity of winter resorts ought to have the effect of a reduction of prices.

That now is the time when yearly bills come in with a rapidity that makes some of us ill.

That there has been a great exchange of duplicate Christmas presents in town the last few days.

That the man who waits for the new year to form good resolutions, very seldom keeps any of them.

That a bride of last December has gone to Europe with her mother, leaving her husband at home.—New York Mail and Express.

The bird that flutters least in the air remains longest on the wing. The effects of Warner's Log Cabin Hops and Buchu remedy are lasting because it puts the stomach in good working order, and thus the whole system is restored to its normal condition. 150 doses for $1. All druggists.

What Clerks Can Save.

About the most discouraging condition in the world is that of the young and ambitious man who plods along and at the end of each year has only his living to show for his labor, says a Western exchange. Small savings seem insignificant, but they are not so if persisted in for even a reasonable length of time. There is nothing of novelty in the table of savings given below, but it will open the eyes of many a clerk to the possibilities before him, resulting from a very simple method which many persons, unfortunately for their declining years, have not thought it worth their while to adopt:

TABLE OF SAVINGS.

Per Day.	Per Year.	10 Years.	50 Years.
$ 02½	$ 10 00	$ 130 00	$ 2,900
05½	20 00	260 00	5,800
11	40 00	520 00	11,600
27½	100 00	1,300 00	29,000
55	200 00	2,600 00	58,000
1 10	400 00	5,200 00	110,000
1 73	500 00	6,060 00	145,000

"Hard Times Come Again no More."

"Hard Times Come Again No More," is the title of one of those popular songs that the people took to as soon as it was sung by a member of a minstrel troupe. And they could not help it, for the plaintive music and comforting sentiment was what their hearts were sighing for. Years ago a young lady, afflicted with that dreadful malady the small-pox, asked her whom I loved better than any human being that ever was born, to sit by her bedside and sing that sweet song. At that time I was in my "teens," with no cares or anxieties; yet I often asked that sweet singer to warble that song of hope and cheer. Twelve years ago, when the Daily Witness was making its desperate struggle for existance, that song was sweeter than ever. While the dark clouds were rolling by, with not an inch of silver lining to dispel the gloom, and I was tired, almost discouraged and heartsick, what a magical change come over me when from those same lips gently came the words; "Hard Times Come Again No More!" I shall never again in this wide world hear them again from my gentle wife. Still they are not forgotten; for the people sing them yet.

Last week, with my boy and one of my daughters, I heard them from a quartet. Just as sweet as ever, and as fresh.

How I wish there was no such a thing as "hard times," especially among families! In many a home last Christmas it kept good old Santa Claus away. The little ones wanted to hang up their stockings; and father and mother had to invent some excuse for the non-appearance of that kind old man this year. The little "tots" went to bed sad and the parents a good deal sadder. No joy in the homes where "hard times" reigned supreme.

Love goes a good way to make home an earthly paradise; but "hard times" will cast such a gloom around the hearthstone that even love will be unable to give cheerfulness. Father and mother cannot meet the situation and talk cheerfully to the little ones.

When "hard times" knocks at the door of a mechanic or farmer it strikes terror into the hearts of the inmates. There are only two things that are harder to bear disgrace and death.

But, sad to relate, "hard times," as a rule, are generally brought about by the wrong-doing of heads of families.

Deplorable vices creep into homes in this country. Sometimes it is the spirit of gambling that saps the foundation of all true ideas of right living. Especially is this true with the lower classes of great cities. A disposition to get something for nothing takes possession of them, and they go to dreaming or thinking over "lucky numbers." Playing policy is a curse among the poor, the evil of which no one can realize except those who make it a study. When you see mechanics or washerwomen going into a policy-shop, put them down as already on the road to ruin. They might as well try to make headway against a cyclone as to "buck against the tiger." A dose of "hard times" is in store for them that will make them shiver in winter and go hungry in summer.

Want of thought often brings on "hard times" among the working classes. Something occurs between them and their employers that could easily be settled. But "American independence and foreign impudence" (as a noted clown once termed it) takes control of their councels, and the result is no work. That means poverty in the homes, with all its deplorable results. Workingmen, please think several hours before you say, "I'll quit. Give the interests of your wife and children a chance to have their influence before you shut the door of the cupboard that has always supplied your wants.

The drink-curse has been one of the greatest helps to bring on "hard times" among the masses. How many little toes it has caused to be frost-bitten; how many little rivulets of tears it has been the means of starting down the cheeks of innocent boys and girls!

One morning, at about two o'clock, I was going home from my work down Spruce street to the ferry. At one place there was an outlet on the sidewalk for the steam that came from boilers underground. Some half-dozen poor boys lay upon the grating to warm themselves, for it was a bitter cold night. Some were asleep, and others trying to go to sleep. One little fellow had his foot tied up in a rag., Asking him what was the matter, he replied "Frost-bitten, Mister." "Are you hungry, as well as cold?" A husky voice answered, "Yes." To make a long story short, rum had broken up his home, and he was now grappling, at the age of nine years, with "hard times." That poor boy drank coffee and ate cakes that night as if he had never had anything since the second day of his birth. If dead now, he has been saved from a life of rheumatic pains and a score of other diseases. For the sake of the "hard times" that will fall to the lot of your wives and children, I beg of you, workingmen of America, to keep away from the saloons.

I'm glad that song was ever given to the people. What a blessed day it will be in the history of this country when "Hard Times Come Again No More;" when husband, wife and children sit with no heart-ache caused by anxiety as to how they shall be fed, clothed, warmed, or housed! What a picture a nation of homes so situated will make! It's the nearest idea of heaven on earth that my imagination can conceive.

Is such a condition possible? It can be approached so nearly that the difference can hardly be told, if the people will all do right.

Stop drinking that which hurts soul and body; stop gambling; stop doing all those things that tend to wreck home and destroy the happiness of this Nation of families. That will hasten the time when "Hard Times Come Again No More."

And above all, stop serving the devil, and give yourself unreservedly to Christ, [illegible] —By Thomas E. [illegible] N. Y. W[illegible]

Business Habits for Girls.

When a boy enters a business he enters it with the expectation of devoting himself to the employment that he has selected for life, or he means to make it a stepping stone to that which shall be his lifework. When a girl enters business she does not do that; she does not concentrate her mind to her work, but expects naturally, in due course of time, to be a wife and to be taken care of, and I, for one, feel very sorry to have girls educated to any other view of life. A girl is more valuable in business after the age of twenty-five. She is by that time trained to business habits, is self-reliant, and recognizes the value of devotion to business. Usually, if she remains until that age she begins to consider self-support as the necessity of her life. It has sometimes been asked why could not the American husband and wife do what so many couples do in France—that is, work together in the same business side by side? There is a danger in that system. Where a man has the spirit of true manhood and self-respect, it is perfectly safe for a woman to continue her wage earning power after marriage, at least until she is called to the higher duties of motherhood. When once that comes into her life all her powers—mental, spiritual—should be consecrated to this holy office.

As I said, if a man is a real man it is safe for a woman to continue earning wages after she is married; but I think there are hundreds of men to-day, yes, thousands, who have been ruined because they were not compelled to support their wives. If a man who earns small wages marries a woman capable of earning as much as himself there are nine chances out of ten that he will develop extravagant habits because of the added income of his wife. If they could agree and hold to the decision that they should live on the husband's income and let the earnings of the wife accumulate as capital for a business in which they both could engage, it would be well, but their earnings would be largely dissipated in personal adornment, the passion for which, especially among the middle classes, is the bane of Americans.—Mrs. L. W. Betts, in The Epoch.

What Am I To Do.

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappily but too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A Bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhea or Constipation may be a symptom or the two may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulation, tenderness in the pit of stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.

DEEP [illegible]

SALT RHEUM

is a disease that some one has termed "Our Glorious Yankee Humor." Small vicicles form on the skin which are filled with water, and after a few days this breaks through, often forming large patches. It is hot and itching in its nature, and not unfrequently causes much suffering. This is the season of the year when it makes its appearance, as it is at this time that we begin the use of hearty food, especially that of a fatty nature which aggravates this disease. Then too the absence of the light food of summer, generally laxative in its nature, gives the disease opportunitiet to gain strength and to fasten itself more thoroughly upon the system.

On Davis street, in Bangor, resides Mrs. Edwin Wiley, whose daughter was badly afflicted with Salt Rheum. At times her face and hands would be covered with blotches. So intense was the itching sensation that applications of salt were made to destroy it. For a long time no relief could be obtained. One day some one suggested Brown's Sarsaparilla, and a bottle was purchased. Later Mrs. Wiley brought her daughter to the establishment of Mrs. Ara Warren where Brown's Sarsaparilla is made. The face that a short time previous was covered with blotches, burning and itching, presented as fair and smooth an appearance as that of a young lady. Less than one bottle was used. This case, like others we present, came unsolicited, and shows again the wonderful curative power of Brown's Sarsaparilla in cases of humor and bad blood. In this case the humor was driven from out the system through the natural channels freeing the blood of the foul material which fed the humor, causing it to dry up and disappear.
