

DON'T TAKE OUT YOUR GAS RANGE

Heat your kitchen with our little Kitchen Heater, which is attached to any gas range. It will burn gas, coal, wood or refuse. It takes up very little room and has two top rings, so it can be used for cooking also. In some houses it is necessary in order to heat the kitchen properly to substitute a coal or wood range for the gas range, which is used in the summer. Now, it is not necessary, as this invention solves the problem and enables anyone to keep their gas range all the year round. This little heater furnishes the necessary heat for the kitchen and at a very small expense.

DYNAMITE IN THE MAKING.
Workmen Who Are Enclosed by Death in Gallons and Tons.
So thoroughly deceptive is dynamite in the making that you are apt to be disappointed on viewing the surface of things. You could not readily fancy thunderbolts leaping and crashing from tender blue skies that the most fearful forces in creation are hidden under such a peaceful exterior. Nitroglycerin, a cupful of which would distribute you over square miles of landscape, is diligently mixing around you in hundreds and thousands of gallons.

It is making itself in big iron vessels, cascading down leaden gutters and finally tumbling in minute Niagara-like fountains into a vat, where the deliquescent yellow pearl passes its journey powderward. Out of one inconspicuous it fares suddenly through special head coils, driven only by cooling blades of air, and is drawn off the draft also and piped on to the next perfecting stage. Gase with the nitroglycerin is sent into one of those big cauldrons. The interior is brilliantly illuminated by electricity, the only illuminating agency permitted in or about the danger houses.

Around you are other houses at uniform distances apart and connected by a series of narrow gauge tracks wherein workmen are railroaded nitroglycerin from here and pulp cotton from there to be compounded into dynamite and blasting gelatin. Greatest care is taken in rolling the product from house to house. As soon as a loaded cart is ready to pass out of the nitroglycerin house, for instance, a semaphore signals from an adjoining station, to which the consignment is carefully hurried.

Around you are long storehouses packed with pulp in tons of innocent whiteness. Presently this pulp will assume a tan color under the nitrating process, and then, suddenly becoming carbonite, red cross, hercules, judson and giant powder, torcite or what you order, it develops the quiet virtues of dynamite—dynamite or blasting gelatin in which more natural forces are condensed to the cubic inch than exist anywhere else in creation. Death, curbed and sleeping, circulates you in gallons and tons. Annihilation threatens at every turn in the form of potential pulverizing forces. But the man and the mercury are there also, alert, responsive, reliable.—Levitt's Weekly.

The Syracuse Herald's Markets.
In modern newspaper making no detail is overlooked and with the development of the up-to-date telegraph facilities, the whole world is constantly in touch. This is especially noticeable in the strides taken by the daily afternoon papers, they now being the acknowledged leaders. The Syracuse Herald with its superior equipment now prints in its daily edition the complete market reports of the New York wholesale field, the Stock Exchange, bond and cotton markets, bonds and express stocks, the latest quotations on the Chicago grain market and the Chicago live stock market, besides the Syracuse quotations, giving the reader each evening all the prices of interest when they are fresh, so that it is no longer necessary to wait until the next day to get the exact prices in the great trade centers.

LIBRARY SLOW POKES.
Time Killing Methods of Officials in Continental Europe.
"Americans who grumble about having to wait a long time for books when applying to a public library," said a Boston literary woman, "should try to work or study in a foreign library, particularly in Germany."
"The typical continental librarian takes no account of time. The reader, writer or student must turn in his or her application for books at least a day in advance. The men who search for the books applied for are aged, tottering creatures who have been shuffling around the dusty piles of books for years, and the word hurry is not in their vocabulary."
"The most priceless books and manuscripts are kept in places which are perfect fire traps, and disorder predominates in every department. When you speak about the impossible methods employed the librarians tell you that they are too poor to introduce any modern indexes or catalogues. This is to some extent so, but as a matter of fact they would not change if they had all the money in the world at their disposal."
"They do not wish to encourage the common people to use books. The learned are among the aristocracy, and the spread of the knowledge which is hidden in those wonderful literary museums is far from the purpose of the men at the head of Europe's libraries."
"There may be some delay in our libraries, but our people in the lower walks of life are certainly ahead of the common people of the old world in the matter of getting books when they want them, and generally free of charge."—New York Telegram.

The Town to Be Born In.
In the German town of Klingenberg, near Aschaffenburg, Bavaria, in addition to having no rates to pay for the upkeep of the town, those actually born in the parish receive from the municipality a sum of $12.15 a year. This sum, if invested regularly at, say, 3 per cent, would entitle the owner to receive about $1,500 at the age of sixty—a very handsome old age pension. Were it not necessary that the inhabitants should prove birth in the parish before becoming entitled to this payment the popularity of Klingenberg as a place of residence would doubtless be enormous.—Westminster Gazette.

Costly Law Robes.
An English judge's outfit in the way of robes imposes a heavy tax upon the newly appointed judge, although the cost is not nearly so great as it was in the early days of Queen Victoria. Then it was the custom for the law luminaries to attend court functions in figured damask silk gowns, with costly lace bands and ruffles. The judge, a celebrated legal dignitary of that day, is said on one occasion to have spent $100 on bands alone. The lord chancellor's robes cost something like $100, and even a judge's stockings are an expensive item. The wardrobe of a judge costs anything from $500 to $800, and if the newly bedged "my lord" is attached to the king's bench division he will require five gowns, a stride, a scarf, a casting hood, a black cap, a three cornered cap, a beaver hat, a cocked hat, a silk hat, lace bands and two full court suits, swords, etc., to keep up the majesty of the law.—London Globe.

News When It is News.
In reading a newspaper did you ever stop to think of how much of it is really fresh? In the morning newspaper 95 per cent of the news appears under the date line of the day before, and a good share of the local news articles are filled with "yesterday's," while in the afternoon dailies, the bulk of the matter of events "to-day," regardless of what it has happened. Nothing is too remote with the present modern facilities to escape the corps of correspondents that encircle the globe. The same is true of the local and vicinity news. The reporters quickly communicate it to their offices and while the news is still fresh it is printed and delivered to the readers. Especially is this true of the Syracuse Herald, which has the most modern and costly facilities of any paper in the entire section.
