Robert Brown, who saw the family of Muskrats at Ames' Mill, seems to have the good luck to see animal life at its best. Recently, while driving to work, on passing an old stone wall near the road he saw a mother raccoon and her five little ones which were about half grown. He stopped his car and watched them at their play while they crossed the road. A year ago at the same place he saw the mother and six little ones. Let us hope she escapes the hunters another year to raise another family.
