This Press is portable; especially designed for Hay and Straw, but equally efficient for Cotton, Wool, Tow, Rags, Hops, &c., &c. It costs not far from $300.

In pressing Hay or Straw, the material is first driven into a mould, forkfull after forkfull, by a "Beater," weighing from 120 to 150 pounds, filling the mould, and descending perpendicularly fifteen feet, (much like the action of a pile driver,) and as rapidly as hay can be conveniently pitched in. When the mould is filled by this process, the hay or straw is subjected to a pressure of three hundred tons, by means of two side screws. While under this great pressure, it is secured by wire and wooden hoops. The elasticity is so completely taken out of the hay, that the strain upon the bands is by no means excessive; and as bails hold in this hay as well as in wood, three or four of ordinary size, driven through the lap of a hoop, or a half dozen twists given to the end of the wire where they lap, are sufficient to hold either. The dust is almost completely driven out of the hay, through the crevices in the mould, by the action of the Beater. Nor is the fibre injured by the operation as might be supposed. The stamping down process, resorted to by other presses, is far more injurious to hay, and objectionable to the animal. For these and numerous other reasons, "Beater Pressed Hay" is preferred, and commands from $3 to $5 per ton more in market at the West, where this Press originated, and is extensively used.

It is worked with great facility by steam or water power, but a team of horses and three men, are capable of turning out a bale of 400 lbs. in ten minutes. These bales are 3 feet 9 inches long, by 22 inches wide and the same in depth. Fifty, or even sixty of these bales may be put in an ordinary box car—day ten or twelve tons—which is more, by one-half, than can be put in the same space by any other known press.

Of this hay or straw, more tons can be put in a vessel's hold than of cotton, or of any miscellaneous merchandise. The bale is of the shape, form and finish of a brick, and will stow as advantageously—no space being lost. It requires less space than Flour in Barrels. By means of this Press paper makers may lay in their straw for less than half the price it has hitherto cost them, and a year's stock may be stored in a small space and be insured for a trifle.

Hay also retains all of its original fragrance, being air-tight—and, in the bale, may be left out unhoused for a year, without material injury to the hay, beyond the first or top layer. It can be pressed from the field with entire safety.

A bale of this hay, or straw may be sawed up into blocks as readily as wood and the cut presents a better and smoother surface than wood sawed. It may be used for breastwork, and is better than cotton. It may also be hewed down from the end with great dispatch, thus obviating the use of a hay cutter.

The demand for pressed hay has been constantly increasing for many years and the amount consumed in cities is already enormous. Many people suppose that the unusual demand for it, of late, is caused by the war—such is not the case, although the Government want much, use much and waste more when loosely pressed.

THE NEW YORK STATE

Beater Press Company

Was formed to introduce this press into every county in this State. Parties using other presses and paying nearly three times as much as we pay to get hay to market have now an opportunity, by becoming mutually interested with us, to secure an adequate number of presses. Our hay is sold in advance for a much superior price to yours and we have durable contracts with railroads for low rates of freight. We ship in box cars and you will be compelled to wait long. We can load a car to its full capacity; you cannot half load it.

It remains to be seen how much you can make in competition with our Press. Nor do we limit the capability of our Press to hay and straw. We can make a better bale of cotton on a $300 press than can be made in New Orleans on a hydraulic press costing often as much as $20,000. What we can do with cotton we repeat with wool, rags, tow, hem
