THE PALLADIUM

FRIDAY, MAY 14, 1897.

THE TORONTO WAY.

The city of Toronto makes a good thing out of its street railway service. It gets a percentage on the gross receipts and also mileage. So long as the gross receipts are $1,000,000 or less a year the city gets eight per cent.; between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 per annum, ten per cent.; between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 per annum, twelve per cent.; between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 per annum, fifteen per cent.; and on all gross receipts over $3,000,000 per annum, twenty per cent. Until the present time the city has received nine per cent. on gross receipts. In addition to this the company pays to the city $800 per mile of single track per annum. The city constructs and keeps the roadbed in repair, the company laying its rails, ties and stringers at its own expense. Since 1891 the city has received from mileage $257,778.94 and from percentage on receipts $317,559.42. The Toronto road runs only on week days. By its contract with the city it must sell tickets good to be used at any time at the rate of twenty-five for one dollar. Tickets that may be used between six and eight o'clock in the morning and five and seven o'clock in the afternoon, are sold at the rate of eight tickets for twenty-five cents. The service is said to be one of the best on the continent.

INACTIVITY.

The country has got Congress on its hands and no mistake. It is doing nothing and even the sharp rebukes of Republican papers from every quarter can not rouse it to activity. Speaker Reed has not appointed his committees and holds the matter over the members as a club, to force the Tariff bill through when the tinkering is done with. Those who do not get into line for the measure will be punished in the committee assignments. This is a deplorable condition of things. The Chicago Tribune finds it necessary to talk in plain fashion to its party leaders: "Republican leaders in Congress who were confident a month ago that the Tariff bill would be sent to the President before the end of June are doubtful now whether it will go into effect before the middle of August. That being the case, further inactivity on the part of the House of Representatives is inexcusable. The country has not viewed with satisfaction the spectacle of a House which has done absolutely nothing since the end of March. It will be profoundly dissatisfied if the House remains idle until midsummer and then adjourns after disposing of the Senate amendments to the Tariff bill. Undoubtedly Speaker Reed has made up his committees long before this. He should announce them and let the members go to work. There are many subjects which demand their attention and which they can consider now instead of next year." This is sound advice. There are indeed many things that demand Congressional attention. There is the currency question, for instance. These Republican Congresses cost the country dearly.

TILLMAN SCORES THE SENATE.

Whatever may be said of South Carolina's eccentric Senator Tillman, it must be conceded that his speech in the Senate yesterday in relation to the Sugar Trust scandal, had the ring of downright honesty about it. He had the courage to tell the truth while others trembled. The Senate was considering the resolution of Senator Allen against the exercise of Executive clemency in the case of Chapman, the broker, who had been sentenced to prison for refusing to answer questions in the Sugar Trust investigation. There had been considerable discussion over the resolution when Tillman took the floor, and in scathing terms arraigned the Senate for cowardice. He told the Senators some truths that no other Senator had the courage to tell. He looked the situation straight in the face and rebuked his colleagues for attempting to cover it up with flippancy and badinage. Referring to the fact that the press correspondents have charged that Senators speculated in the sugar stock of the Sugar Trust while the sugar schedule was being considered in the Senate, Mr. Tillman said:

"It is not Chapman that we want. Two correspondents have charged over their own signatures that Senators have been speculating on stocks within the last week and have made money. If you want to investigate it, you have now a new reason for it. If you want to get at the true inwardness of the matter and punish those who are guilty, do so or else hush. That is the whole sum and substance of it. We don't want Chapman. We want Havemeyer. We want the man who bought your men, if they were bought. We want the man who bought your committee last week, if it was bought, and now let the Senator from Nebraska take his resolution to the committee and bring back something that will mean something. We can now make these correspondents state where they got their information from, or, if they refuse to state it, we can punish them for contempt. We can call Havemeyer and the grandees of the Sugar Trust and make them answer, or we can put them in jail for contempt. Either investigate so as to find the truth and punish the criminals or hush."

And then the matter was "hushed," for the present at least, by referring the resolution to a committee. Senator Tillman is entitled to the gratitude of the country for his vigorous and manly utterance. He hit the nail squarely on the head when he said it was not Chapman, the broker, who was wanted, but the Senators who had used their official position to make money. No wonder Tillman is not popular in the Senate.

Toronto is going to experiment with a departmental living house. The building is to be erected in the central part of the city, 200 feet square and six or eight stories high, to have a concert hall, a roof garden and a basement restaurant capable of seating the 600 people who will occupy the house. A company with $300,000 capital stock divided into ten dollar shares will undertake the enterprise. The scheme will be watched with interest.

The New York World keeps right on publishing daily contributions to the discussion of the question as to the advisibility of matrimony, notwithstanding this rebuke from one of its readers: "It's all rot that you're printing about young men marrying. Any well men can support a wife, and ought to. If he doesn't, he's not worth considering."

A writer in the Springfield Republican closes an account of the Grant tomb as follows: "Then it quieted down. The veterans of the war were coming. Old men now, white bearded, gray headed. After the thunder of the salute the passing of the old men who had fought the great fight of thirty years ago touched all hearts. They had trooped their tattered battle flags which were furled.

"From the spear point of the staff of each a living streamer waved. A hush of reverence greeted the warriors who were nearing the hero's tomb, bringing him the days they had carried through the fight and an unspoken greeting on their lips. As they neared the tomb a solitary cornet broke the silence. Why were the people in tears? What an appeal was in that silvery tone that sent it through the heart: The notes brought back with a pang the battle days in the early spring of life, the time of crash, of trust, and soldier love. The tune was 'Auld Lang Syne.'

Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And never called to mind?
Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And the days of Auld Lang Syne?"

The Buffalo Enquirer gets off this story: The inebriated gentleman thought there was no greater sport than tossing peanuts to the elephant.

To see the huge beasts roll up their trunks, open their red mouths and gulp the little morsels down and wink with an ecstasy of pleasure was one of the finest sports of this or any age.

After tossing a bagful to one old beast he hunted up a friend of his. He explained the sport and the two of them started over to try it.

They edged alongside the row of huge beasts and selecting a large one the inebriated gentleman that acted as guide shouted "Ho!" in a loud voice.

This was to attract the elephant's attention.

Then he, after nudging the other and warning him to watch close, threw a peanut.

"Didn't he ketch it?" he asked.

"No, didn't make a move," said the other.

o o o

More were thrown. The result was the same. Another elephant was picked out. The elephant seemed to be above such a puerile sport.

"Mos' strcrdinary; mos' 'markable. Guess ole fool'r had all they want," said Inebriate No. 1.

Still there was nothing like perseverance and the man knew it.

He picked out another.

"Here's one wif big forehead. Jee whater big forehead. Awful queer things elephants, slope all sorts of ways."

Then he threw some peanuts.

The elephants made no move.

"Say, y' ole fool you're at the wrong end of elephant, don't you know anything?"

The crowd behind laughed, but the inebriate said. "Knew was somefun wrong," and contentedly allowed himself to be led away.

A woman caused quite a commotion in one of the big Boston stores the other day. Her husband is a bank president in Newburyport. The National banks receive their bills in sheets of twelve, which are cut after being signed. The generous president gave one of these sheets to his wife, and she naturally started at once for Boston. After making some purchases she drew the bills out of her pocketbook and calmly said to the clerk: "Lend me your scissors and I will pay you," thereupon cutting off a bill. The astounded clerk at first refused to receive such money from so open a manufacturer of currency, but finally the matter was explained.

DEATH OF EDWIN PARKHURST.

Was Formerly Engaged in Business in Oswego.

The Albany Argus of Wednesday contains the following announcement of a gentleman at one time well known in Oswego:

"Edwin Parkhurst, prominent in musical circles as a teacher of the piano and organist of the Jermain Memorial church at Watervliet, died rather suddenly from pneumonia at his home, No. 191 Lancaster street, on Monday. The announcement of his death was received with sorrow and surprise by his many friends in this city, few of whom were aware of his illness, which developed from a heavy cold and an attack of grip. Mr. Parkhurst was born at Ascutneyville, Vt., in 1834. His father was Orson Parkhurst, a manufacturer of knit goods. He received his education in the public schools, and at the age of twelve years his parents moved to Cohoes. During his whole school career young Parkhurst showed a passionate fondness for music, both instrumental and vocal, and, being an apt pupil and a studious one, soon gained an enviable reputation for himself as a music teacher. Among his instructors was the late Professor Thomas Lloyd, who for years was the instructor in our public schools. In 1864 he married Elvira Alexander at Cohoes and from there went to Oswego to reside. It was in 1874 that he took up his residence in this city, having secured the position of organist at the Jermain Memorial church. He was not only a devout student of music, but was well-read on many subjects. Of a retiring disposition, his many talents were kept in the background and even his own friends were not cognizant of his rare attainments. He is survived by a wife and three sons, Fred A., Henry L., and Edward B. Parkhurst. The funeral will be private to-day at 11 a. m. from the family residence. The Rev. Walton W. Battershall, D. D., will read the prayers, and interment will be had in the Rural cemetery."

The announcement of Mr. Parkhurst's death will be received with sincere sorrow by many former friends in Oswego. At one time Mr. Parkhurst was engaged in business here and with his brothers John and George and Mr. Henry S. Wright formed the old Schubert Quartet. Mr. Parkhurst was a musician of much ability, not only as an instrumentalist but as a vocalist, also.

Charles O'Connor Says He Has Not Been Away With Emma Saulsberry.

FULTON, May 14.—Charles O'Connor, who was said to have eloped from here Wednesday morning with Emma Saulsberry, returned to this village this morning and the woman returned last night on the 6:02 R. W. & O. train. O'Connor claimed this morning that he did not elope with the woman, although he had been as far as Watertown. The Saulsberry woman could not be found this morning, as she had not returned to where she had been living. Clayton O'Connor and the Sypher woman are still missing.
