The Mightiest Play on the Planet—The Largest Production Ever Placed on Tour

The GARDEN Of ALLAH

DRAMATIZATION OF THE NOVEL BY ROBERT HICHENS AND MARY ANDERSON NAVARRO

100—People On the Stage—100

A Real Moving Caravan of Native Arabian Men, Women, Children, Camels, Horses, Donkeys, Goats, Etc.

Swirling, Soul-Stirring Sand Storm --- All Being Transported in Its Own Special Train

This Mighty Spectacle has the world's longest run to its credit; more people have paid to see it; more mechanics, electricians and a larger ensemble being required for its presentation than any play, spectacular or otherwise, ever presented. More than a score of camels, horses, donkeys, dromedaries and beasts of burden are used in its presentation; over 100 people are on the stage during every performance, making it the mightiest play on the planet. There is but one company presenting this masterpiece and only a limited number of cities will be visited. The entire production has a special train of seven cars for its transportation.

wife is dissatisfied with their social position and is constantly nagging her husband to get in with the rich but unscrupulous business crowd. At the offer of a successful stock broker and former college chum, the husband consents to put inferior effort in the big government dam then under construction, and secretly receives a large sum of money with which to gratify his wife's social ambitions. The grand finale is reached in the dramatic climax, when news is brought that the government dam has broken and hundreds of lives have perished. The policy of the Home Stock Company will be two plays a week, with a change of bill on Monday and Thursday. A Wednesday and Saturday matinee will also be presented. The seat sale opens Tuesday at 9 a. m.

BASEBALL NOTES

Yesterday's homers were: Baumann, Yanks; Leonard, Boston Red Sox; Lewis, Red Sox; Keating, Yanks.

Ty Cobb celebrated his return to the game after several days' lay-off by banging out a double and single.

The Braves and Giants had to postpone yesterday's game on account of snow and Benny Kauff was unable to engage Cobb in a long distance batting duel.

Coombs and Dender, former teammates on the Philadelphia Americans, engaged in a pitching duel. Coombs, now hurling for Brooklyn, won from his old pal, with the Phillies.

Outfielder Hinchman of the Pirates made a double play unassisted when he caught Grah's liner and then ran to first base before Chase could get back.

The Cubs made it seven straight when they downed the Cards, 7 to 0. Hendrix allowed two hits.

The Athletics were beaten out in the ninth when two passes, two hits, a hit batsman and an error gave the Washingtonians four runs.

MODERN BASEBALL PLAYERS GENTLEMEN

Vast Difference Seen by Hotel Proprietors

Old time fans always will give one an argument as to whether baseball is any faster now than it was in the palmy days of "Pop" Anson and "King" Kelly.

The silver temple brigade finds it mighty hard to admit that Ty Cobb has anything on some of the stars of yesterday and that Walter Johnson is harder to hit than Amos Rusie was before Amos tried to strike out John Harleycorn every evening after the game. But there is one point on which the veteran patrons and players concede something to the present generation. They admit that baseball than they were once.

There used to be a time when managers of first class hotels would have welcomed a proposition to house big league ball clubs just as much as they would have rejoiced in the chance to entertain a flock of plague patients. The very idea filled them with horror, for the players were likely to do almost anything except burn the house down.

All of the old time ball players were not tough. In fact, the large majority behaved as well as anybody could ask. But there was a fair percentage of fellows who never were intended for polite society. The "bad actors" were allowed about all the rope they cared to take, too, for the better element figured that every man's conduct was his own business.

Nowadays rotundism of the field has virtually been eliminated. Now and then, some individual kicks over the traces, but the spirit of the managers and clubs is against anything smacking of "rough stuff," and those who want to cut up seek some place where their boss and their comrades will not find them.

So at present the hotels of the best grade, instead of calling for the police when a major league club tries to register, hang out the welcome sign. Lew Tuller, owner of a leading Detroit hotel, is one landlord who doesn't care how many ball clubs stop at his house. He had the White Sox as guests all last season and says that a better behaved body could not be recruited anywhere in the world.

"Prejudices against ball clubs are dying fast among hotel proprietors," said Mr. Tuller recently. "In fact, it is just about dead now. The members of the Chicago club, whom I entertained last year, compare favorably in deportment with anybody who comes here. In fact, you never would know that there was a baseball aggregation in the hotel, so quiet are the men. Lots of my guests never learn that they have been stopping under the same roof with Eddie Collins and Joe Jackson except by accident.

"There is no class of patronage that I rather would have than that of big league players, and just as many clubs can come here as we have room for."

The Garden of Allah
The seat sale opened this morning for the magnificent scenic production, "The Garden of Allah," replete with every detail, and acted by a strong and well chosen cast, which will be the attraction at the Richardson next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee.

It is a dramatization of Robert Hichens' great novel, by himself, assisted by Mary Anderson de Navarro, into four parts and nine scenes.

A man at war with himself and the world is in the springing for the action of the play. Behind the action, but always where its presence can be felt, stands the wonderful desert with its grand simplicity. And never for a moment does the audience forget it in the presence of the desert—"The Garden of Allah."

From the time the first curtain rises on the desert at dawn until the last part, the wonderful, indelible vastness in all its changing moods fascinates the observer. The war in the heart of man is fought to a successful termination, but the desert stands the same at the close of the performance, and its changeless sands give an impression of solidity and unchanging character.

Stage properties of a nature and upon a scale never seen before in this city will be used to enhance the beautiful settings. Crowds of Arab and natives will fill the street scenes. Great caravans of natives with camels, horses, donkeys and goats cross the desert, plodding ankle deep through the shifting sands.

Accessories in keeping with every detail of desert travel will be shown. In fact, no item, however insignificant, has been overlooked.

The strong cast and company of over one hundred are thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the drama, and their handling of the difficult parts will show most careful training in every one of the startlingly realistic scenes. Seats are now selling for all performances, phone 1292.

Coroner Files Decision
Drowning of John R. Sullivan Was Accidental

Coroner Vowinkel today filed his report on the inquest into the death of John R. Sullivan, stating that the young man was accidentally drowned in the Oswego river, at the foot of East Cayuga street, March 18 last, while cutting ice away from the hydraulic canal flume. The coroner states that no person or persons were responsible for Mr. Sullivan's death. The decisions in the case of Mrs. Johanna Collins, drowned in the lake April 26, and James Gillen, who died suddenly three weeks ago, were also filed.

NOT ENEMY AIRSHIPS BUT NORTHERN LIGHTS
Brilliant Celestial Display Last Night Attracted Much Attention

Oswegoians of a nervous and super-imaginative temperament were quite sure that the brilliant display of northern lights that appeared in the heavens last night were searchlights from Zepplins or aeroplanes sent over by some European power to carry out a campaign of "frightfulness."

The display was one of remarkable brilliancy and arrested the attention of hundreds. The lights shot across the sky leaving a trail of fire, which illuminated the heavens. The lights would appear, disappear and then reappear, becoming gradually fainter until at 11 o'clock they had disappeared with only a faint glimmering movement to mark them from the stars.

Professor Edward Drake Roe, Jr., of Syracuse University, an explorer of the heavens, made an extended observation of the lights from his private observatory and came to the conclusion that the lights were caused by electrical phenomena of an unusual character, one of the forms of the aurora borealis or northern light, although all the rays did not come from the north. Students of these phenomena believe they are caused by the discharge from the sun of electronegative ions, which are caught in the earth's magnetic field and carried toward the poles. They are estimated, when visible, to be from 50 to 100 miles above the earth's surface, and are thought to be created when the electricity, arriving in the thin layers of the atmosphere, parts with its energy. This gives rise to a visible discharge similar in appearance to the lengthened electric spark in a vacuum tube.

West Albany Shop Team

Has Organized Again
The New York Central baseball team, organized from employees in the West Albany shops, will open its season Sunday afternoon on the Young Men's Christian Association diamond at West Albany when it will meet the Brukeman's nine. The team will play the Oswego employees later in the season.

The State league season will open next Wednesday afternoon, Albany playing in Utica, Troy meeting the Stars in Syracuse and Elmira starting off in Binghamton. The following day the season will open in Pennsylvania, Wilkesbarre opposing Scranton in the latter city.

PERMANENT STOCK AT THE RICHARDSON

The popular priced theater enthusiasts will be glad to learn that Manager Bosworth has secured a permanent stock company for a spring and summer engagement in the Richardson theater. Oswego but emulates the example of nearly any other city of equal size, as they nearly all can boast of permanent companies of their own, presenting one or more successful plays each week and so conducted that they become the favorite place of amusement for both young and old.

This company is known as The Home Stock Company and have one of the most remarkable records in theatrical history. Their stay in Akron, Ohio, was one hundred and twenty-five weeks, with nearly two solid years in Erie and an equal time in New Castle, Pa. They have been popular favorites in Cleveland, Toledo, Cincinnati, and are one of the cleanest, high-minded and refined organizations in this country.

After the opening night, Thursday, May 4, the selection of plays will be left to the audience, but a wise selection has been made by Colonel Horne himself as an opening offering. "Fine Feathers" is the kind of a dressy society play that will appeal to all and has the punch and snap so dear to the hearts of all good show lovers. This play tells the story of a poor but honest architect, who is happily married and lives on Long Island. His
