

HIS LAST JOKE.

"Would you care to make a few remarks before we spring the trap?" asked the sympathetic sheriff.

"No," replied the condemned man. "I may have my faults, otherwise I wouldn't be here, but trapdoor eloquence always did offend my idea of the fitness of things."

"Getting Practical." "You know Bookins, the tender, who used to sing to Miss Skeezicks that every morn he would bring violets?"

"That's what he did, and they got married and now they're living in the country where every morn he has to bring her two buckets of water and help wipe the dishes."

"Business." "I was surprised to see you in conversation with a notorious gambler," remarked the dominie.

"Most undoubtedly," replied the deacon. "I was trying to find out who to cash in the various poker chips I find in the collection basket."

"CAN'T TELL." Mrs. W.: Have you any cooks on hand? "Six in the kitchen."

"One thing works out simply grand." "Said Gushing Gertie Proctor: The doctor pays a visit and the visit pays the doctor."

"Distant Acquaintance." "Hands that horse! Don't let him handle you!" belted the sergeant to the cavalry rookie.

"And George?" "Yes, dear?" "Will you swear I'm the only girl you ever kissed?"

"I don't believe in revenge." "I don't either. But just the same there are a number of men I do business with who have kept me waiting in outer offices for half an hour or more I'd like just once before I die to keep waiting to see me."

"Several Raisins." How famous is the raisin. With its kick of ten per cent. But the thing that hurts the tenant is the raisin of the rent.

"The Housing Problem." "Why don't you leave your husband?" "I have no place to go."

"Both May Be Right." "How is your new book?" "Why, I think it's punk, but my publisher thinks it's better than my last one."

"Easy to Do." "You're looking pale tonight, my dear." "Am I? Then do tell me something that will give me a little color."

"Not Diplomatic." "Why did Miss Olden discharge her butler?" "He boasted around that he had grown gray in his service."

"I know you've had a bad time. But I am your Kaiser and your master. Your fate lies in my hand. But I consider that you shed your blood for me."

The cripple was pale with rage. "According to the law of Sept. 23, 1915," he said, "I am forever unfit for service. Thereby my fate is removed from the hand of the Kaiser. I have shed my blood for family and my home. At least I believe that and it would be bad for my country and my people if it had been shed for the dynasty. You are the Kaiser, but not my master. I am a free man, even though I'm a cripple."

The cripple hobbled off, leaving behind His Majesty, ashen white. A crumpled 100-Mark bill lay at the Kaiser's feet.

TREATY CONTROL OF EUROPE IS COMING BACK. London, July 13.—The old treaty of Europe in the more extreme, though possibly under much more favorable circumstances, is being rapidly restored.

The sponsor of the amendment to Article XXI of the league covenant, recognizing and encouraging local applications of the broad principles laid down by the league, Dr. Benes, the Czechoslovakian foreign minister, is also one of the moving spirits in the Little Entente.

"The amendment is an important addition, I believe," he said, "to the League of Nations covenant. There are many local problems that, for the league to attempt to settle, would provide endless complications. This amendment will provide for their settlement on the principles of the covenant by the nations concerned."

Our nations have gained our independence at a great cost and we mean to see that nothing upsets it. We have arranged treaties requiring military support in a case a member of the Little Entente is attacked or in cases where the peace of Central Europe is prejudiced. We want to prevent war from breaking out.

"Because Czechoslovakia has refused to enter into a Danubian confederation, which is supposed to be able to bring about peace in Central Europe, we have been accused of seeking to keep Austria and Hungary beggared. I have opposed the Danube confederation. It is not wanted. If we formed the Danubian confederation without the other powers, we should be outnumbered two to one, which would not be had but for the fact that both Austria and Hungary are so strongly influenced by Germany. It would amount practically to a re-establishment of Mitel Europa. That we simply cannot tolerate. Just as we cannot tolerate an Austro-German union."

"Austria's condition, even without any alliance is improving. She has plenty of coal. Her chief difficulty is to get capital invested in her industries."

"Central Europe and Austria especially, has been the victim both of internal economic depression and worldwide depression. Within six months the worldwide depression will show a great improvement which will automatically aid Central Europe."

KAISER HEARD THE TRUTH. FROM CRIPPLED SOLDIERS. Berlin, (By Mail to United Press). To war historians who painted the Kaiser as a near-God, as a hero, overlooked this tale—the story of a war-wounded man who scorned His Majesty and told him coldly and plainly truths he had never before heard from a subject.

This happened in summer of July, 1916, when the bitterness of the popular against the government was first beginning to make itself felt. The Kaiser, living comfortably in Sans Souci palace at Potsdam, had seen little of the horrible struggle "out there in the field."

The retainer went on the search. One invalid was there. His mood was bad. The weather was too hot and his leg—shot off below the knee for the Fatherland—pained him.

"Come with me, please," he said. "His Majesty wants to speak to you." "He doesn't know me." "His Majesty wishes to see a war-wounded," said the retainer.

"Then let him go out to the lazar-ets," retorted the invalid. "There or on the front he can see them in heaps and he needn't worry about their crying 'hurrah!'"

"His Majesty will give you something—probably 100 marks," said the retainer enticingly.

"A healthy leg would be better, and how do I know I'll get the money?" he answered.

The retainer was nonplussed, and finally passed a 100 mark bill to the invalid just as the Kaiser himself came along.

The Moving Picture Holdup

The journey across the desert is not a distracting one, and any diversion is gladly welcomed, so that, when the flashily dressed man stood up at the end of the Pullman and began to address the passengers, everybody went forward and gathered around him, laughing and clapping. They thought he was going to offer something for sale.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began the flashily dressed man, "I am going to repeat to you what I have just said to the passengers in the next coach. When we reach Bad Water, in ten minutes or so, a moving picture man will be upon the platform to take some pictures representing a hold-up. I ask of you, fellow-passengers, to feign alarm, and if one or two of the ladies will pretend to faint it will help things along."

Everybody began laughing and eagerly awaited the stop at Bad Water. This was the fourth day of the transcontinental journey, and the passengers were on very good terms with one another. They began to discuss train robberies.

"I'll never give up a cent," exclaimed a stout, perspiring drummer, wiping the alkali dust from his features. "Well, as for me, I know I should just faint," answered a demure young lady. "And before I fainted I'd just fainted over everything I had."

"Not with me around, you wouldn't need to," answered the drummer gallantly.

The other travelers did not commit themselves, for at that moment the train began to slow down and there appeared the irrigation ditch from which the station took its name. Then the little tin-roofed shanty came into view, and a moment later a half dozen men, wearing sombreros and masked, with pistols stuck all around their waistlines, leaped forward across the tracks. One jumped into the engine cab and held his pistol to the forehead of the engineer. The mail van was next attacked, while two men made their way into the foremost of the coaches.

Upon the platform a moving picture operator had set up his instrument and was busily reeling off the film, the passengers, interested in the scene, gathered around him.

"Now, ladies, now, gentlemen," interposed the flashily dressed man in tones of remonstrance, "won't you please go back into the coaches and be robbed? You're interfering with the operator. It spoils the reality of the pictures, your standing around here as though nothing had happened. People will think the picture's a fake, and it's going to be exhibited in all the leading cities of America. Won't you go back?"

Two or three did turn back toward the coaches in a half-hearted way, but the rest remained obdurate. A pistol shot rang out, followed by a woman's scream for help.

"You told me it was fun," shrieked a woman's voice. "I won't give you my rings. I won't, I tell you. There, take them, then. And that's every penny I have in the world."

"It's Big Ike and his gang," somebody screamed. "It's real enough! My God, it's all real!"

Then the flashily dressed man came dashing out of his coach, a smoking pistol in his hand. He was followed by two of the gang.

"Hands up, you silly sheep," he yelled. "Hands up or I fire. Now, then, back into the cars. One at a time, please. You'll keep them above your heads while I keep through you."

Sleep, he had called them, and like sheep they obeyed. The first to do so was the commercial traveler. There was a look of terror on his red face, and he held his arms erect as ramrod.

Only one traveler remained upon the platform. It was the demure young lady who had been discussing her course of action in the event of a real hold-up. Instead of fainting she stamped her foot violently and actually shook her fist in the flashily dressed man's face.

"I won't put my hands up and I won't give you a cent. And I've got ninety dollars inside my waist and I defy you to take it, you coward. There!"

Upon the platform the operator was still grinding off his film. The flashily dressed man approached the young lady, took off his hat, and made her a bow.
