THE REAPER KINGS.

A Theory That Lincoln's Candidacy Was Due to Their Wars.

Among the different types of reapers and the numerous variations of each type the bitterest rivalries prevailed. There was no pool, no "gentlemen's agreement," no "community of interest." Indeed the "harvester business" was not business. It was a riotous game of "farmer, farmer, who gets the farmer?" The excited players cared less for the profits than for the victories. As fast as they made money they threw it back into the game. Mechanics became millionaires and millionaires became mechanics. The whole trade was tense with risk and rivalry and excitement, as though it were a search for gold along the high plateaus of the Rand. And this in spite of the fact that, with the exception of McCormick, Osborne and Whiteley, the men who came to be known as reaper kings were not naturally fighters. No business men were ever gentler than Deering, Glessner, Warder, Adriance and Huntley. But the making of reapers was a new trade. It was like a vast, unfenced prairie, where every settler owned as much ground as he could defend.

Each step ahead meant a struggle for patents. Whoever built a reaper had to defend himself in the courts as well as approve himself in the harvest fields. Cyrus H. McCormick especially, as William Deering soon learned, wielded the big stick against every man who dared to make reapers. He was the grizzled old veteran of the trade, and he gave battle to his competitors as though they were a horde of trespassers. He was their common enemy, and the reaper money that was squandered on lawsuits brought a golden era of prosperity to the lawyers.

Some of these patent wars shook the country with the crash of hostile forces. The tide of battle rolled up to the supreme court and even into the halls of congress. Once in 1855, when McCormick charged full tilt upon John H. Manny, who was making reapers at Rockford, Ill., a three year struggle began that was the most noted legal duel of the day.

McCormick, to make sure of his victory, went into the fight with a battery of lawyers whom he thought invincible—William H. Seward, E. M. Dickerson and Senator Reverdy Johnson. Manny made a giant effort at self defense by hiring Abraham Lincoln, Edwin M. Stanton, Stephen A. Douglas, Peter H. Watson, George Harding and Congressman H. Winter Davis.

From first to last it was a lawyers' battle, and McCormick was finally defeated by Stanton, who made an unanswerably eloquent speech. For this speech Stanton received $10,000, and Lincoln, who had made no speech at all, was given $1,000. Yet in the long run the man who profited by this lawsuit was Lincoln, for it was this money that enabled him to carry on his famous debate with Douglas and thus made him the inevitable candidate of the Republican party. — H. N. Casson in Everybody's Magazine.

He Didn't Care.

"We—we want you to marry us," said the blushing young man, indicating a young woman with downcast eyes and smiling face who stood a step behind him.

"Come in," said the minister. And he endeavored to ease their embarrassment for a moment. But he soon decided that it was useless to try.

"Will you be married with a ring?" he inquired.

The young man turned a helpless gaze on his companion and then looked at the minister.

"If you've got one to spare and it can come out o' the $2, I guess she'd like it," he said at last.—Youth's Companion.

Solicitude.

"I have had a delightful evening, Miss Genevieve," said young Cholly, rising to go at 11:30, "and I had no idea it was so late, had you?"

"Why, Mr. Smallweed, I"—

"For heaven's sake, Miss Genevieve," exclaimed the young man in alarm, "don't yawn! There was a girl who yawned too hard the other day and dislocated her jaw!"

With an effort she turned the yawn into a laugh, and the idiot remained ten minutes longer.—Chicago Tribune.

How to Make Cold Cream.

To make cold cream take of oil of almonds two ounces, spermaceti half an ounce and white wax a dram. Melt together and while cooling add two ounces of rosewater, stirring until cold. Cold cream may also be made by this formula: Take four ounces of unsalted butter, four ounces of white wax and an ounce of vaseline. Melt together and perfume with oil of bergamot. The more cold creams are stirred and beaten while cooling the whiter they become.

FAMOUS SCHOLARS.

Men That Might Have Been Called Human Encyclopedias.

It has been said of Macaulay that not only did he retain in his prodigious memory all that he had ever learned, but that he had learned all manner of things no other scholar would have retained. Aside from his astonishingly comprehensive grasp of many branches of human knowledge, he was specially proud of the fact that he knew whole libraries by heart. It was his boast that in the event of a wholesale destruction of certain classics he would be able to supply the deficiency out of his memory. It was claimed among other things that he could recite "Paradise Lost" without a moment's pause for refreshing his recollection and that to reel off all the plays of Shakespeare was only child's play to him.

Another English scholar of astonishing erudition was Lyulph Stanley, of whom Lowell said, "He knows three times as many facts as any man whatever had any business to know."

Stanley is said to have had only one rival, Palgrave, the compiler of "The Golden Treasury." "It's an even chance which will return alive," was said when Stanley and Palgrave went on a trip together. When they did come back, it is related, Palgrave was pale, emaciated, silent. But Stanley seemed unmoved and more all knowing than ever.

Another human encyclopedia was Buckle, author of "The History of Civilization." One night, it is said, he was laying down the law on sundry topics with a pomposity that caused the table to quake. At last he put forth some statement about the burning of a witch, setting the date about a century out of the way. Stanley, who was present, had borne some preceding inaccuracies very well, with only a shaking of the head and a reddening of the face.

But at this juncture his self control gave way and he leaped to his feet. Extending his hand, he piped forth in a vigorous treble: "I beg your pardon, sir, but the last witch was burned at such and such a place, in such and such circumstances. And her name was So-and-so, and you will find all about it in a book to which I can easily refer you and which you evidently don't know."

And so torrents of imprisoned knowledge were poured on Buckle's head until the historian of civilization sat wrathful, extinguished, mute. But in a little while he had his revenge. Some one had mentioned a new dictionary as a good one. "It is," said Buckle most solemnly, "one of the few dictionaries I have read through with pleasure."—St. Louis Republic.

Writing to Himself.

"Some men on the road write letters to themselves before they get to the next hotel, so they will appear 'important' when they register and ask for their mail," said a hotel clerk. "But that isn't always the reason. We soon catch on to them, because we see their handwriting on the register and on their mail, and I noticed it once in a man whom I finally got to know very well.

"He wasn't the kind of fellow who cared anything about appearing 'important,' I found out, so I asked him why he did it. The explanation was very simple. He had a miserable memory, and when he was in another town and would think of something he had to do in Columbus he would write it on a slip of paper and mail it to himself. He didn't put the memorandum in his pocket for fear he would forget about putting it there."—Columbus Dispatch.

Earth as Food.

In New Caledonia, New Guinea and in the Malay archipelago the consumption of earth as food is comparatively common. In Java and Sumatra a certain kind of clay undergoes a preliminary preparation, being mixed with water, reduced to a paste and the sand and other hard substances removed. The clay is then made into small tablets or cakes about as thick as a lead pencil and baked in an iron saucepan. When this process is over the cake of earth resembles a piece of dried pork. The Javanese eat small figures roughly modeled from clay, made to imitate animals, birds or men.—Kansas City Journal.

Warts.

Little is known about the causation of warts except that the irritation of dirt is in the majority of cases the prevailing factor. The color of them is caused by dirt, and if they are well scrubbed with soap and a nail brush they will become lemon or pink color or even quite white. The best application is salicylic acid, either with collodion or in the form of a plaster. Every three or four days the parts should be well soaked in hot water and the softened portions of the wart peeled away, when the application is renewed.—London Answers.

Torturing eczema spreads its burning area every day. Doan's Ointment quickly stops its spreading, instantly relieves the itching, cures it permanently. At any drug store.
