Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it, and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

That's the Great Secret of Oswego Praise Given to Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills.

There come times to every life when a lack of strength, failing appetite, poor circulation, weak heart action and many other symptoms may break in. They are not diseases, the person may not be laid up until they have existed a long time. The influence of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills is to create Nerve Force and immediately people find themselves getting well because Nerve Force controls every vital organ of the body. Mrs. John Watson of No. 28 East 4th St., Oswego, N. Y., says: "I can recommend any of Dr. A. W. Chase's medicines at any time—Kidney-Liver Pills—as the result of long and successful experience and the nerve pills that I got at Mead's Drug Store on West 1st St., as the result of recent trial. I used the nerve pills as a heart tonic believing the nervous system was at the bottom of its irregular action. The result proved I was right. The pills toned me up, nervous system and general system, and as a consequence the heart action is strong and regular again. This is highly gratifying."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. are on every package.

TERRY'S NEXT VICTIM

Who Will Have the Pluck to Tackle McGovern?

M'FADDEN AND WALCOTT NAMED.

These Two Hard Hitters Mentioned as Possible Opponents For the Featherweight Champion After He Has Got Through With Ged Jordan.

Having conquered two of the best lightweights in America, Erne and Gans, it is for Terry McGovern, the wonderful featherweight champion, to sigh for new men to pummel into submission. With Erne and Gans beaten in a few punches, the sports naturally are looking over the field for some other fighter who may be pitted against the Brooklyn phenomenon after he has got through with Ben Jordan, the Englishman. In the lightweight class there appears to be just one other man capable of making things hum for Terry, and that is George McFadden of New York, who is thought by many sports to have as much of a right to the lightweight championship as either Erne or Gans. While Erne won the title from Kid Lavigne in a 20 round bout on points, McFadden is the only man who ever put Lavigne to sleep. He also has the credit of being the sole knocker out of Gans in 23 rounds. In a fast fight with Erne, which was won by the present champion, McFadden did so well that there was a great howl over the decision. Since then Erne has studiously avoided McFadden, who in the meantime has put the very clever Jack O'Brien to sleep.

McFadden has never been put to the floor in a groggy condition and consequently has never been knocked out. He is one of the strongest and also one of the roughest pugilists in the ring. A powerful hitter, he has an impregnable defense which few have bored through. His best fighting weight is 133 pounds at the ring side, which he can make and be as strong as a bull. McFadden's only fault is slowness at times and a tendency to hold back in aggressiveness if he thinks an opponent is dangerous. But, taken altogether, he is a tough proposition and appears to be the next man for McGovern to tackle. It is a fact that Terry and his manager, Sam Harris, have all along regarded McFadden as the most dangerous lightweight of all. Right after his victory over Erne McGovern had a chance to take McFadden on, but he shied, preferring to try out some one else. If a match is considered between McGovern and Mc-

JOE WALCOTT.

Fadden, it is more than probable that Terry will insist on special weights—say 130 pounds, ring side—for he does not care to let McFadden have too much of an advantage.

McFadden, on the other hand, will refuse to make such a concession, maintaining that McGovern took Gans on at 132 pounds at 7 p. m. and that McFadden should enjoy a similar privilege.

Several sporting authorities have suggested Joe Walcott as a possible opponent for McGovern, but they want to see the "Giant Killer" come down in the scales. Walcott is a welterweight and a terror at 140 pounds. Five years ago he contracted to take on Kid Lavigne, then lightweight champion, in a freak bout. Walcott had to weigh in at 133 pounds, and if he failed to knock Lavigne out inside of 15 rounds the latter was to win. The weight undoubtedly weakened the "Giant Killer," for he was nearly put to sleep himself after a fierce fight. Since then Walcott has staid in the welterweight class with great success, his most remarkable victory being a knockout of Joe Choynski, the California heavyweight.

If Walcott should be asked to weigh 133 pounds for a fight of six rounds with McGovern, nobody can tell whether he would accept or not. McGovern is a featherweight, not a lightweight, and Walcott is a hitter such as Terry has never tackled. Joe is also a hard man to hurt in a fight of such short duration. Walcott, of course, would be handicapped somewhat by the weight, but his fighting ability and ring experience would make him a more dangerous opponent than either Erne or Gans. Not long ago Walcott was redhot after Tom Sharkey's scalp, but the sailor couldn't see it. From Sharkey, 185 pounds, to McGovern, 124 pounds or thereabouts, is quite a drop, but Walcott can draw big money if he gets a match with the featherweight champion. Walcott is not so tall as McGovern by an inch or two, but is a physical marvel. Joe has had more trouble in whipping men of his own build and weight than opponents of bulkier make up. McGovern has so far whipped them all, big and little. McFadden or Walcott, which will Terry pick?

REFEREE OF ATHLETICS.

Professor Waldo Appointed to an Important New Office.

For the first time in the history of western colleges an arbitrator has been appointed by the colleges themselves to settle certain disputes in athletics. The step is considered most important for the cause of athletics, as should it prove a success the office will without doubt be made permanent, and the holder will receive increased powers. The arbitrator chosen for the coming year is Professor C. A. Waldo of Purdue university. He was selected by the members of the cofaculty conference held in Chicago. Professor Waldo's duties relate mostly to football. He will have full power to decide on what constitutes a college, and he will be the umpire on eligibility rules, especially cases that refer to the four year limit. He is well known as a champion of pure athletics in the west and has been an influential member of various committees for several years. He was elected to serve one year.

STRANGE POWER OF IROQUOIS FALSE FACES

Aboriginal Combatants of the Dominion of Evil.

The False Faces of the Iroquois are at it again. The evil spirits which lurk behind the grinning masks of the northlands are keeping the good Indians busy waving the wand of exorcism. The machinations of the Mansiou are manifest. The oppression of the Oka is upon the aborigine. And so the select circle of devil chasers must work, work, work to prevent the infliction of bodily ailments upon the people and dance, dance, dance to drive out the demons of disease.

These discouragers of the dominion of evil style themselves the False Face society, says the New York Herald.

IROQUOIS MEDICINE MAN'S MASK.

They enjoy a direct behest from the great ruler, Rawen Niyoh, whom they also name Taronyawagon, or Holder of the Heavens. When the inanimate mask of an enduring diabolism lays hold of a copper colored son of the Grand river reserve, the good men of the tribe that invests Ontario with romance go forth and labor until the lost spirit shall cease from troubling and the victim be at rest.

At such times the members of the society appear, marching in the stolid dignity of the "Indian file," each wearing a mask and carrying a turtle rattle. They stir the hearth ashes in the house of the invalid, execute mystic manipulations, sprinkle ashes over the sick one's head and finally lead him around in the False Face dance, which concludes the ceremonies.

To a very large extent the secrecy that formerly characterized the False Faces no longer exists. Many if not all of the members are known, but they continue to hold meetings from which nonmembers are excluded. The fiction is maintained of having two women to act as mediums of communication between the society and outsiders, but these women are only the cooks of the feast.

The Iroquois medicine man's mask is rare and valuable. One specimen is the property of Mr. David Boyle of Toronto. It was the oldest with one exception in possession of the Canadian Iroquois and was made 70 years ago by We-bwa-gek-ti (Carrying News on His Back), who is still living on the reserve at Brantford. He is a nephew of Hy-joong-kwas (He Tears Everything), who has been for many years chief medicine man and who wore this mask on all ceremonial occasions in connection with the False Face society, as well as at feast mask dances in the long house.

As to the masks themselves, the belief that each is the abode of a spirit has resulted in the creation of a myth to account for its origin in a supernatural sense. The following is the myth of A-k'-on-wa-rah, the mask of Hy-joong-kwas:

After the making of the world and its people by Rawen Niyoh he left it for a time, but when he returned he was one day walking through an open place, following the sun, overlooking his own work and examining the ground where the people were going to live, when his eye caught a strange, long haired figure coming in the opposite direction.

Rawen Niyoh said to him, "Where did you come from?" to which the False Face replied: "I am the real owner of the world. I was here before you."

Rawen Niyoh said, "I think I am the real owner of this world because I made it."

"That may be quite true," the False Face assented, "but I have been here a long time, and I have a good claim to it, and I am stronger than you are."

"Show me how you can prove this," demanded Rawen Niyoh.

The False Face suggested that they retire to a valley not far from two high mountains. The False Face ordered one of the mountains to come nearer, and it moved close to them. Rawen Niyoh was very much surprised at the result.

Niyoh then said: "You have power, I see, but of what use is it to you? What good can you do with it?"

To this the Mask replied: "I use it to make people well when they are sick. Now I would like to know what power you have."

Niyoh said, "Do you want to see my power?"

The Mask said he did.

"Very well, then," answered Niyoh. "I will show you my power, for I made the world."

The Mask then said, "Make the other mountain come closer up to us." On Niyoh's suggestion that the two should face about as before they did so, and Niyoh told the mountain to come close up to the first mountain, which it did. Niyoh slipped from between the mountains, but the Mask, turning round quickly to see what had happened, brought his nose up with great force against the face of the mountain, which stood behind him like a big wall, and the pain made him put out his tongue.

"Now," said Niyoh, "you see I have also great power, and to make you remember this your nose will always remain crooked and your tongue will always hang out."

The False Face then knew that Niyoh had more power than he had, and ever since the only sound he can utter is a tremulous and somewhat subdued "Hoh-o-o-o, hoh-o-o-o-o."

Each was satisfied with the exhibition of power on the part of the other, and Rawen Niyoh said, "I think it would not be well for you to be seen here by the people who are coming to this place, because you are so ugly, for everybody would follow you to look at you."

A-k'-on-wa-rah (the False Face) agreed to this on condition that be should be allowed to claim the new people as his grandchildren, and they were to call him grandfather.

"I will help you all I can," said he, "to drive away sickness from among the new people, and I am able to protect them from storms by causing the winds to go up high in the sky."

Rawen Niyoh replied: "I am sure you have much power to help the people, and you must keep this power as long as they live. We will make a bargain. They shall be your grandchildren and you their grandfather. They must observe the dance—the False Face dance—at the long house forever. Now we make this bargain, which shall last as long as you and I and the people and the world shall last."

Rawen Niyoh and A-k'-on-wa-rah then separated, the former saying, "I am going toward the setting sun," and the False Face saying, "I go where the sun rises."

It will be seen from this story that even Rawen Niyoh is not supreme. His power is equaled by that of A-k'-on-warah, and both are able to transport themselves to any part of the world at pleasure.

Hy-joong-kwas being too old to act in his official capacity, he was induced with great difficulty to part with his mask. Believing the mask to be the abode of a veritable spirit, it was necessary to placate that spirit to atone for the insult of giving the mask to somebody else. Besides, Hy-joong-kwas and the mask had been so long in communion that its transfer, even for a consideration, was no ordinary business transaction.

He went through the ceremony of burning tobacco in the stove and said:

"We shall not be very far apart, and I will often think of you and will often burn some tobacco for you."

On concluding this touching little address he threw all that was left of his handful of tobacco into the fire, took the mask from the back of the chair and after once more stroking its hair handed it to Mr. Boyle with a request that he would rub its face with oil once or twice a year, as it had been accustomed to such attention ever since Hy-joong-kwas owned it and would be pleased to be remembered in this way!

New York Hop Market.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—Locally there has been more business, but in a quiet way at full prices. It was reported that one sale of several hundred bales State hops was made for export on private terms. A lot of California hops was stopped here in transit for the sake of testing the New York market. The quality was good medium, and the best bid was 14½c. This was not accepted and the lot was ordered forward to London. Mail advices from the State were of a strong tenor. A letter from Ontario county stated that business has been more active; there were sales of some 300 bales for export. Franklin county advices were to the effect that the market there was very stiff owing to purchases at 17c for New York and the West. Waterville reports not much doing, but that growers expected better prices after the new year opens and will not sell. Western dealers, it is stated, have been offering 16c for choice, but have not succeeded in getting any.
