

WHELAN BOYS WERE NEAR DEATH

LAUNCH EXPLODES NEAR NEW YORK AND PARTY ALMOST DROWNS.

As a result of the burning of their motor boat, the Dolphis, in Long Island Sound, near Glasson Point, the Bronx, on Tuesday evening, James D. Whelan and his brother Robert, both of whom are well known in this city, were severely burned.

In company with two New York girls, the Whelans were on board their boat preparing to go ashore to an amusement park for a dance. As the tender was being pulled alongside one of the young men went into the cabin to look for something and struck a match. Instantly there was an explosion and in a second the boat was wrapped in flames. The party to save themselves leaped into the water.

Edward Gilligan, a hotel proprietor, put out in his launch to the rescue and at the same time a New York fireman who was on the pier dived in and swimming to one of the girls took her ashore. More trouble was experienced in saving the others and all three sank several times and were almost exhausted when finally located by Gilligan.

The young men and their father are well known in business circles throughout the State through their connection with the United Cigar Stores and the Whelan Brothers Stores. Robert Whelan made a reputation in college athletic circles as the captain of the Colgate football team. He has appeared in this city several times in basketball games both as a player and as a referee.

The Whelans are now in the Fordham hospital but will soon recover. Met with Mrs. James Upercraft. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Trinity church will meet with Mrs. James Upercraft, No. 53 East Ulster street, tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock. All the ladies of the church are cordially invited.

Advance Guard of Summer Visitors.

Oswego has always had a warm place in the hearts of her former sons and daughters and many of them consider it an incomplete year without their annual visit back home. This is as true this year as ever before. The New York contingent is a particularly loyal band and few of these are derelict in the matter of the summer sojourn here.

The first of the summer visitors from the metropolitan district have already arrived, and the Times presents a quartet of them today. Peter Sutton of Newark, N. J., is this pioneer among home-comers. This is not because he is any older than the others but that he has been away longer. Mr. Sutton is in the newspaper game and he knows it from the ground up. He is one of the executive heads of the Newark Star.

Frank H. Loomis is not less modest than his brother George but he got his picture taken and George didn't. The Loomis boys are some pumpkins in the theatrical doings in the big, noisy town. They come every summer and recuperate at Garrick villa in the town of Scriba. Needless to say they come to town occasionally to rest up from their arduous (?) farm labors.

Mr. James Thayer of New York has one regret—that he is not a native born Oswegonian. Mr. Thayer is custodian of one of the big public buildings in the metropolis. He never misses his annual trip to Oswego. His particular cronies here is Peter O'Neill of Oswego Town, former commissioner of public works. Mr. Thayer likes farming—when others do it—and spends much time on the O'Neill farm. He also has many other friends here.

Charles E. Glynn is a native. Mr. Glynn works at the Capitol in Albany and has far as escaped the Democratic official broom. He has just returned from a trip to the Bermudas but he declares that Oswego has it on all the summer resorts. Mr. Glynn says he wouldn't miss his annual visit home for his good job. Now you can't heat that for loyalty.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR

Cool Breezes at Pocono Club Made Dancing Delightful.

The Pocono club on the boulevard was the scene last night of one of the largest attended and most enjoyable dances and receptions of the summer season. Beta Epsilon chapter of Theta Phi fraternity were the hosts and had over fifty couples as their guests.

Dancing was indulged in from eight until one o'clock with intermission and refreshments at midnight.

The hall and parlors of the club house were handsomely decorated for the occasion with American flags, college pennants and electrical effects. One of the features of the decorating scheme was the illuminated shield of the fraternity on the North wall.

Schilling's orchestra, which was in attendance furnished a delightful program of twenty-four members. Special cars were in waiting to convey the guests to the city at the close of the function.

QUIT TALKING NOW AND "PLAY BALL"

Rowans Want to Play Fulton for County Championship.

The Fulton Independents are getting bumpy in claiming the county championship, according to Oswego fans, and to contest this claim the Rowan Stars will play the Independents at any time for any amount of money. So far this season the Rowans have met the Independents twice. In the first game at Fulton, the Oswego boys won 10 to 5. In the second game which was played in this city they were trimmed by the Fulton crowd to the tune of 4 to 3.

A series of games for the championship between the teams from the two cities would arouse a lot of interest and now, since the Rowans have made the offer it is up to the Independents.

Big New Bill at Richardson

Tonight is the opening of the new vaudeville for the last half of this week at the Richardson Theater, and a clever bill is offered. Brown, Adams & Company appear in a little sketch entitled "Billie's Sister." This act is well costumed, staged and acted. Charles E. Faust, the choir boy, will entertain with songs and a bright monologue that is certain to please. The Roma Trio, will also be on this bill in popular serenades, classic and operatic selections. The bill will be complete with four reels of the latest motion pictures shown on the new screen. To the Richardson Theater for a nice, pleasant, cool, comfortable and enjoyable evening. Phone 1292. Seats reserved three days in advance.

At the Hippodrome.

The Whiteside-Strauss company will present for the last time at the Hippodrome tonight that beautiful rural play "York State." It is different in style from anything yet seen in Oswego with the simplicity of rural life, droll humor and quiet speeches, with just the right amount of heart interest, and for variety's sake alone, it is attractive. Theatergoers will have but a few more opportunities to see this high class organization which has made such a tremendous hit in this city and has been declared by all to equal many of the higher priced attractions. Friday and Saturday, a great Western bill, "The Cowboy Millionaire," will occupy the boards. Five classy vaudeville acts are introduced, including: Marie LeClaire, character comedienne; Dewey, the mad violinist; Vivian Laidlaw, the Canadian tightrope; Clark & Hanson, a great comedy musical act, and Beatie Mae & Will H. Strauss, in stories, songs and dances. Seats can be secured for any evening performance in advance at the box office or ordered over 'phone.

DER DRITTE PREIS FUER LIEDERKRANZ

Third Prize For Liederkranz. OSWEGO SINGERS HAD ONE GREAT TIME AT ALBANY

The Oswego Liederkranz returned home last night from Albany where they won third prize in class C in the singing competition of the Central New York Saengerfest. Herkimer Germania won first prize and Ilion Maennerchor took second prize. The Oswego saenger report a most successful trip in all things but one. Their only regret is that they did not win the first prize.

The singing this year was far better than in past years and it was quite an achievement to get in on the prizes. Diplomas were given as prizes. Most of the important cities of Central New York were represented by first class singing societies.

The judges of the competition were very strict and the closeness of the three first teams was a thing to marvel at. But two points separated the first and third teams. Oswego lost the first prize by two points and were just one point behind the second prize winners.

The Syracuse Liederkranz won first place in Class A with Troy Maennerchor second, and Schenectady Beethoven Maennerchor third. Schenectady Liederkranz won first place in class B. Poughkeepsie Germania was second and Syracuse Arion third.

Welcome to Our City

Joseph Gill, of the Western Union office, who has been visiting in Brooklyn, New York, Weehawken, West Point, Asbury Park and other Eastern points for the past six weeks, returned home yesterday.

Mr. Gill reports a fine time and says all the Oswegonians in the big city are well and happy.

He attended four ball games but quit suddenly as the Giants lost one every time.

Mr. Gill says "Sammy" Williams has it on Bridwell like a tent when it comes to walloping the pill.

Looked Like Fire, But Wasn't

What looked to be a big fire attracted the attention of passersby on the bridge this morning. Men were at work cleaning out the dust from the Northwestern elevator through a chute which has an outlet at the upper South East corner of the building. As the dense clouds of dust issued forth they presented a remarkable resemblance to clouds of smoke and fooled many people who stood for some minutes wondering where the fire department was.

RECENT WRECK RECALLS DISASTER

W. H. Steele of Altmar Describes Railroad Horror in 1853.

DROWNED LIKE RATS

More Than Fifty Victims of Disaster When Train Plunged Through Draw Bridge Over Norwalk River—Yale Students Had Narrow Escape.

ALTMAR, July 13, 1911. TO THE EDITOR OF OSWEGO TIMES: The recent sickening railroad slaughter on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad near Bridgeport, Conn., so fairly described in your issue of yesterday, vividly recalls to my mind the greater and more horrible one of April or May, 1853, as described for me in 1854 by my roommate, Donald D. Shaw of Delaware county, this state, of the class of 1856 (Chauncey M. Depew's class) at Yale.

On the afternoon before the catastrophe a party of Sophomores had gone to New York to attend some theatrical performance, I think, and to have a good time generally with the intention of taking the last early train back to their college duties. But for once (possibly but not probably) in their college course, they "slept over" the 5:30 A. M. bell for chapel prayers and recitation before breakfast and had to take the next train. Telephones were not dreamed of, telegraphic communication much slower than today, and although they heard a rumor of a railroad accident somewhere on the line they were poorly prepared for the ghastly sight of forty-four drowned people laid out for identification on the station platform at South Norwalk.

If you will take the trouble to look at a good map of Connecticut, you will see that the Norwalk river empties into the head of an estuary opening into Long Island Sound between South and East Norwalk. The head of this estuary is crossed by the railroad on a long centering draw-bridge. The early train from New York was much behind time and making it up at high speed and the engineer, for some reason—darkness, fog or want of signals—did not discover that the draw-bridge was wide open. Instead of crossing on the rails his engine, with one mighty leap, struck the base of the draw center in the middle of the deep estuary, dragging the tender, baggage and smoking car and first coach in line with it to sink out of sight in the deep water and mud, while the second coach stood with the front end in the water and mud, its rear standing up to the bank abutment, drowning forty-four people as remorselessly as rats in the hold of a sunken ship.

Then the Connecticut Legislature woke up and passed an act that all railroad trains should cross a draw bridge. I think this calamity occurred in the first week of April, as I was told that several of the Yale faculty went down to South Norwalk from fear that some of their students were on the train coming back from their spring vacation.

I shall always remember a genuine "Kino-go-bragh" dialogue in connection with an escape from personal accident in my childhood: "Pat—'Sura, Moke, there's nothin' loke prinsce of moind." "Mike—'Bedad, I know a bethuag wan; abinsce of body."
