The Legislature.

The legislators of the state of New York met in annual session at the Capitol in Albany on Tuesday noon. The governor's message was read after the senate and assembly had organized. The new speaker chosen is William Sulzer, of New York. Mr. Sulzer was born in New Jersey in 1863 and is next to the youngest assemblyman ever elected speaker. He has served in the assembly for three terms.

The Republicans nominated Assemblyman Malby, of St. Lawrence county, for speaker, which will place him as leader of the minority for the present session.

Chas. DeFreest was main clerk; Michael B. Belmond, sergeant-at arms; Edward A. Moore, doorkeeper; Anthony J. Walkowsak, first assistant doorkeeper; William C. Filkins, second assistant doorkeeper and Thomas J. Hassett, stenographer.

A bill has been introduced changing the date of electing delegates to the constitutional convention and also the date of holding the convention.

The Republican Silver Law of 1890.

The conspiracy to discredit Republican financial legislation at Washington makes little progress.

Any number of bills repealing the Republican silver law of 1890, under which a limited quantity of 100-cent silver treasury notes are being issued, has been introduced.

But their authors are Democrats who would substitute for the present law a free coinage measure providing 65-cent silver dollars in unlimited quantity; who would return to the Bland law with its $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 worth of 65-cent silver dollars, every month; who would substitute unlimited issues of wildcat currency for honest silver notes; who would contract the currency by furnishing no substitute for the existing silver law, in the interest of greedy bankers, creditors and Wall street the Capel court speculators.

The existing silver law is far preferable to any of the substitutes proposed. So far as the mere repeal of the law, without a substitute being provided, is concerned, we simply desire to say that the people of the United States will not submit to contraction; free silver coinage, the Bland law of 1878, or wildcat currency will be the inevitable result, if the Republican Silver law of 1890 shall be repealed.

That is the alternative.—Albany Journal.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 2.

Representative Springer, of Illinois, is usually what might be called a mild-mannered sort of a man, but his ire can be aroused; in fact it has been aroused and he is now as angry a fellow as any one would care to see. He has been "skunked" in the game of politics, and he believes that a "cold deck" was used against him. Springer is ambitious, those who do not admire him say far beyond his abilities. Be that as it may, everybody in congress knows that Springer is ambitious. It will not be forgotten that he was a candidate before the Democratic caucus of the present house for speaker and that at an opportune moment he threw the few votes he controlled to Crisp, and the result was Crisp's nomination and election. Another result that Crisp was so grateful that he made Springer chairman of what is always when in competent hands the most prominent as well as important committee of the house, ways and means, notwithstanding earnest protest against such action from Democrats who had years ago sized up Springer's brain power.

As chairman of the ways and means committee Mr. Springer has not only made a failure, but he has made himself the laughing stock of a majority of his own party in congress by his "pop-gun" tariff bills, which were reported from his committee and passed by the house at the last session. But that was not plain to him, for he recently announced himself as favoring the Cleveland tariff programme, whatever that may be, and was instrumental in securing pledges from Democratic members of the next house to vote for the re-election of Speaker Crisp, which he fondly hoped would give him a "lead pipe cinch" on the chairmanship of the ways and means committee of the next house, a position which promises to give its holder much notoriety, if no actual fame, during the life of the fifty-third congres.

When Speaker Crisp returned from that much talked of conference with the president-elect, with the Cleveland trade-mark stamped all over him, things began to get so slippery under Mr. Springer's feet that he wondered why some inventive genius had never put political ice-creepers on the market, and even while he was wildly waving his arms in an attempt to keep his balance both feet went out from under him, and he saw it written among the stars that his scalp had been demanded by Mr. Cleveland and promised by Mr. Crisp, and then he fully realised that the tariff bill to be prepared, perhaps "approved" is the proper word; it certainly will be if it turns out to be true, as now reported, that Mr. Cleveland will have that measure prepared under his own personal supervision, by the ways and means committee of the next house will not bear the name of Springer.

Misfortunes never come singly. While Springer was meditating on the suddenness of his fall and the vanity of ambition he was informed that the man he hates above all others, Hon. W. R. Morrison, has been endorsed by the entire Illinois delegation, himself expected, for a seat in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet. Now you know why Springer is the maddest man in congress. He still wears a buttonhole boquet, but the expansive smile which was erstwhile the most prominent feature of his face has vanished, perhaps forever, and he has the look of a man who is working his nerves up to the point of doing something desperate.

Senator Allison returned to Washington today. Needless to say that he was warmly welcomed by his senatorial colleagues and his friends, both in and out of public life. He called on the President at once and they had an hour's talk about the deliberations of the International monetary conference, to which Senator Allison was a delegate. The senator agrees with Secretary Foster in believing that the conference has accomplished some good although failing of any practical results. He declines to express an opinion as to whether any sort of agreement will be reached by the commission when it reconvenes next May.

New Year's day has usually been the most brilliant of the year in Washington, but this year is an exception. The first day of the year falling on Sunday, today is observed as the holiday, but the gorgeous reception at the White house, with all of the diplomatic corps in the full court costume of their native countries, all of the army, navy and marine officers in full dress uniform and the officials of the executive, judicial and legislative department of the government, is sadly missed. Instead of being the scene of this bright pageant the White house is is quarantine, because of the case of scarlet fever with which the President's grand-daughter is confined to her bed. There are no official receptions being held, and the number of private receptions is very much smaller than usual, as many of our most prominent people omitted them as an evidence of their sympathy for the president and his family.

Brasher Iron Works.

Jan. 3.—The infant son of Dan Smith, aged six months, was buried last Wednesday in the cemetery at this place. The funeral services were held at the house, Rev. Alonzo Wells officiating. The choir in the M. E. church at South Bombay rendered some very fine music for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad affliction.

Mrs. Andrew Cooper, of Wisconsin, who has been visiting relatives in this section for several weeks, has been very sick, but under the skillful treatment of Dr. Crooker, is rapidly improving.

Rev. Jenkins, the Episcopal clergyman of Fort Covington, called on his church people of this place Tuesday.

Miss Nettie Murphy, of Montreal, is expected home soon to make a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Collins, of Tupper Lake, who have been visiting the parents of Mrs. Collins, have returned to their home.

Geer Keenan is home on a visit. His many friends hope he has come to make a long stay.

Miss Minnie Spillings, of Bombay, is the guest of Miss Bertha Keenan.

A number of couples from this place attended the New Year's ball at Brushton and at North Lawrence and report a good time.

Mrs. Fletcher has returned from St. Regis Falls, where she has been visiting her son Fred the past two weeks.

Reynolds' Mill.

Jan. 4.—We have had some cold weather of late.

Mr. and Mrs. George Frye and son Willie, of Fort Covington, visited at this place recently.

Quite a number from this section attended the New Year's ball at Bangor last Friday evening.

Mrs. John Gonia, who has been quite sick for the past ten days or more, is now able to be around again.

The Shepard & Morse Lumber Co., who have a camp three miles south of this place, have twenty-eight teams in the woods hauling logs.

Albert Bordeaux and Joseph Young each received a fine holiday present last week. The former was presented with a girl the 26th and the latter the 28th.

Bernard Taylor, who is attending school at Malone, and his sister, Miss Mary, who is teaching near West Bangor, spent New Year's at this place.

Miss Hattie Taylor, who is teaching one of the Indian schools at St. Regis, is spending part of her vacation at this place.

Fred Bordeaux, who has been working on a boat running between Chicago and Buffalo during the past summer, has returned home for the winter.

Miss Gonia, from Dickinson, is visiting relatives at this place.

C. Cady, insurance agent, and Ed Russell, of North Bangor, were at this place last week, and Mr. Russell bought quite a quantity of lumber and shingles from Reynolds Bros. & Co. * * *

North Lawrence.

Jan. 5.—The Christmas tree at the M. E. church was well patronized. The speaking and singing by the children was good and appreciated by all present.

We are informed the New Year's ball at the Union hotel was well attended. Over 150 couple enjoyed the evening by "tripping the light fantastic toe." Church's orchestra furnished the music. We learn that 75 couple enjoyed the evening at the Commercial hotel. Randall & Hart's orchestra furnished the music.

The well-known Shepard family are billed to give one of their musical entertainments in the Union hall in this village on Saturday evening, January 7th. We learn this is one of the best musical troups that was ever in this county. Come and hear them. X.

Lawrenceville.

The statement of the Lawrenceville creamery, L. L. Dewey proprietor and M. H. Ross salesman, is as follows:

Season opened April 25, 1892; closed Nov. 11, 1892.

GEOMETRIC SNARES.

The Skillfully Constructed Web of the Spider.

How the Delicate Structure Is Put Together by the Industrious Insect—Interesting Observations by a Naturalist.

As the webs which my spiders, Lucy and Eliza, says a writer in Longman's Magazine, spun were several times broken or mutilated during the year, either by accident or the gardener, we had plenty of chances for seeing how they proceeded in making them. The lines were in both cases stretched between a white rosebush that climbed up one side of the window and a purple clematis that occupied and draped the opposite mullion. But Lucy and Eliza didn't live in the web—those were only their snares or traps for prey; each of them had in addition a private home or apartment of her own under shelter of a roseleaf at some distance from the treacherous geometrical structure. The house itself consisted merely of a silken cell, cut out from the roseleaf and connected with the snare by a single stout cord of very solid construction. On this cord the spider kept one foot—I had almost said one hand—constantly fixed. She poised it lightly by its claws, and whenever an insect got entangled in the web a subtle electric message, so to speak, seemed to run along the line to the ever-watchful carnivore. In one short second Lucy or Eliza, as the case might be, had darted out upon her quarry and was tackling it might and main, according to the particular way its size and strength rendered then and there advisable.

In building their webs, as in many other small points, Lucy and Eliza showed from the first no inconsiderable personal differences. Lucy began hers by spinning a long line from her spinnerets and letting the wind carry it wherever it would, while Eliza, more architectural in character, preferred to take her lines personally from point to point and see herself to their proper fastening. In either case, however, the first thing done was to stretch some eight to ten stout threads from place to place on the outside of the future web, to act as points d'appui for the remainder of the structure. To these outer threads, which the spiders strengthened so as to bear a considerable strain by doubling and trebling them, other thinner single threads were then carried radially at irregular distances, like the spokes of a wheel, from a point in the center, where they were all made fast and connected together.

As soon as this radiating framework or scaffolding was finished, like the woof on a loom, the industrious craftswoman started in the middle and began the task of putting in the cross pieces or weft, which were to complete and bind together the circular pattern. These she wove round and round in a continuous spiral, setting out at the center and keeping on in ever-widening circle, till she arrived at last at the exterior or foundation threads. How she fastened these crosspieces to the raylines I could never quite make out, though I often followed the work closely from inside through the pane of glass with a platyscopic lens; for, strange to say, the spiders were not in the least disturbed by being watched at their work, and never took the slightest notice of anything that went on at the other side of the window. My impression is, however, that she gummed them together, letting them harden into one as they dried, for the thread itself is always semi-liquid when first exuded.

HEART DISEASE 20 YEARS.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

DEAR SIRS: For 20 years I was troubled with heart disease. Would frequently have falling spells and smothering at night. Had to sit up or get out of bed to breathe. Had pain in my left side and back most of the time; at last I became dropsical. I was very nervous and nearly worn out. The least excitement would cause me to faint. I was also much troubled with fluttering. For the last fifteen years I could not sleep on my left side or back until began taking your New Heart Cure. I had not taken it very long until I felt much better, and I can now sleep on either side or back without the least discomfort. I have no pain, smothering, dropsy, no wind on stomach or other disagreeable symptoms. I am able to do all my own housework without any trouble and consider myself cured.
