Many Bookmobiles

There are 378 bookmobiles in operation in the United States. Most of these, or 258, serve the county libraries; the balance serve the state, regional and city libraries. In addition, six delivery trucks, three trailers, and two station wagons were reported in use for the circulation of books in rural areas.

Frying Fish

When frying fish for meat, cover the frying pan with a colander turned upside down. The holes in the colander will permit the steam to escape so that the food will brown but so the grease will not spatter on the stove.

Here Are Some Useful Tips for Buying Scissors.

Think carefully before buying scissors or shears for home sewing. The right type may determine the ease you'll have in cutting the material and also the appearance of the finished garment.

Forged steel is the best choice for both scissors and shears. It is strong and hard and makes a good cutting edge. The name "forged steel" is marked on the tools.

Decide what type of cutting tool you need—scissors or shears. Shears are at least six inches long, and one handle is larger than the other, allowing room for movement as you cut the material. On scissors the handles are the same size. Dressmaker's shears may have either a bent or a straight handle. The bent-handle type leaves the material flat on the table as you cut and makes for more accurate work. This type is best if you're going to do much work on heavy fabrics; you can cut long, even strokes with them.

Small scissors with sharp points are handy for snipping threads and clipping materials to the corners. Handles are straight—not bent. For efficient use, blades should be sharp to the very tips.

English Language Leads

English has become the world's leading language, spoken by an estimated 200 million people. Hindustani ranks next, with 160 million followers; then Russian with about 145 million, and Spanish, 115 million. The 400 million Chinese speak nine major Chinese dialects; many of which are unfamiliar out of their own districts.
