FEDERAL THOUGHT CONTROL

In this critical problem of adequate education, we must now undertake to help needy states build schools. Such help should be extended only where a state is doing its utmost but because of inadequate resources or special burdens, is unable to do the job on its own.

In such a program the costs of maintenance of administration and the actual business of teaching should be borne by the localities and the states themselves. That is their responsibility. That is the American answer to federal compulsion. It is an American defense against federal thought control. Eisenhower address at Los Angeles, Oct. 9.
