MEDICAL ASSISTANT STUDENT COMPLETES OBS INTERNSHIP

A Fulton woman who likes people, is interested in the health care field and wants to help others has completed her first internship in obstetrical care offered at Oswego Hospital.

She is Debbie Smith, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Ronald Bock of RD 3, Fulton, a graduate of Fulton High School, and presently in the final phase of her 14 months training as a medical assistant at the Stratford School in Syracuse.

During her six weeks at OH, she has carried out clerical duties, including typing reports and forms, maintaining medical records, assuming responsibility of office bookkeeping and filing and retrieving correspondence.

Other activities of a more clinical nature include receiving patients and taking accurate histories; examining their vital signs, assisting in more thorough examinations and carrying out labor room, delivery room, nursery and other maternity tasks.

Smith is also familiar with some laboratory procedures, including blood tests, cultures and EKG's.

According to the head nurse of her department, Mrs. Barbara Nellis, RN, Smith has "demonstrated excellent professional conduct and is extremely dedicated to delivering quality work to enhance patients' health care. Her time here has enriched prior classroom experience."

"We rely on her for the multiple jobs she so willingly performs. Her assistance has provided improved quality and quantity of nursing hours available to our obstetrical patients. All our staff wishes her success and happiness in her new career. She is an outstanding young woman."
