Helpful Hints On Using Protective Chemicals Safely
WHAT TO LOOK FOR ON THE LABEL

"Read any good labels lately?" That's what more and more careful home gardeners who use protective chemicals are asking themselves. Those that do take time to read the label can get some vital information about how to keep their home gardens beautiful in a safe manner.

By reading the label before you buy the products you will make sure it's the right chemical for the job.

report the safety experts at Ortho, the country's leading manufacturer of home garden chemicals. The label also provides full information on how to mix and apply the product for safe, effective use. Most importantly, reading the label will give you first aid information, so you'll know exactly what to do—before an accident happens—if the chemical comes into contact with skin, eyes, or clothing.

A free poster is available about the common sense use of garden chemicals. Send a postcard to: Booklet Distributors of America, 201 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017.
