Add Life to Your Home and Its Contents

Dry air acts like a sponge, drawing moisture from everything it touches. Wood, fibers, plaster-everything in your house has a normal moisture content which is reduced when dry air is present. The result is that furniture joints can become loose, plaster cracks, nails pop through dry wall, moldings and doors warp, textile fibers become brittle and pianos get out of tune.

The money you've invested in your house and its furnishings can be more adequately protected by a good humidifier that will maintain a proper humidity level during the heating season, when dry air is most prevalent.

If you demand perfection..
