Canada Has a Family of Ten with Ages Totaling 720 Years

The longest recorded family in the world consists of ten people, aged from 11 to 71 years, who are related by blood. The family is known as the "Tuxford Family" and is located in Canada. The oldest member of the family is a man named John Tuxford, aged 71. The family has grown and shrunk over the years, with new members being added and old ones passing away. The family is known for its longevity and has become a source of inspiration for people around the world.

Russia's Retiring Envoy Goes Home

Baron Row, a diplomat for the English government, has recently returned to London after serving as the Russian ambassador in the United States. Row has been a key figure in Russian-American relations and has worked closely with his counterpart, Mr. S. M. Krassin, the Russian minister to the United States. Row's tenure as ambassador ended recently, and he has now returned to London to take on a new role in the Russian government. Row is expected to continue his work in the diplomatic field, and his departure has been met with much regret by the Russian community in the United States.

Locomobile Tire Economy

The 1912 Locomobile "Six" runs on less than 400 miles of tire per thousand miles, which is less than any other "Six" that we know of anywhere. This is due to larger tires, higher speed, and the most careful balancing of weight. This difference in our tire economy is of paramount importance. One of our "Sixes" toured Europe, and returned without having to change one of the four original tires.

British Won Title

For the first time in 12 years, the men's singles title of the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships was won by an Australian. The champion was Sir Robert Falcon Scott, who defeated his fellow countryman, Arthur Gore, in the final match. Scott's victory was a significant one, as it marked the first time that an Australian had won the title. The competition was held at the All England Lawn Tennis Club, and drew a large crowd of spectators to watch the exciting matches.
