Travel News

Irish Eyes Smiled 19% More in '74

Ireland earned revenue of $75-million in 1974 from U.S. and Canadian visitors, an increase of 19% over the previous year, according to Tom Barry, the country's minister for transport and power.

The increase, Barry said, was due to an improvement in tourism revenue, and an increase in the number of visits made by tourists.

Barry said that the increase in tourism revenue was due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of tourists visiting Ireland, an increase in the average length of stay, and an increase in the amount spent by tourists.

Barry said that the increase in tourism revenue was due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of tourists visiting Ireland, an increase in the average length of stay, and an increase in the amount spent by tourists.

Barry said that the increase in tourism revenue was due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of tourists visiting Ireland, an increase in the average length of stay, and an increase in the amount spent by tourists.

Barry said that the increase in tourism revenue was due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of tourists visiting Ireland, an increase in the average length of stay, and an increase in the amount spent by tourists.

Barry said that the increase in tourism revenue was due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of tourists visiting Ireland, an increase in the average length of stay, and an increase in the amount spent by tourists.

Barry said that the increase in tourism revenue was due to a number of factors, including an increase in the number of tourists visiting Ireland, an increase in the average length of stay, and an increase in the amount spent by tourists.