ALL KINDS OF

Knitting Done

AT MRS. M. A. POSSONS.

NO more the knitting needle proudly reigns;
Its old, slow, couch-horse pace passes away
And is forgotten. The fair and nimble
Fingers that were wont to wield this tenuous
Tool with frugal care though freezing speed,
Have been taught the uses of more modern
Art, to which the nations homage pay.
That complex construction now in use at
Mrs. Possons' store has been designed by Skilful hands to knit—to weave a web of
Knitting—and the varied accomplishments
Of the complex machine, its wonderful
Achievements in the knitting line, the fair,
Nimble fingers which have learned to fashion
By its subtle hose, the mitten, the scarf,
The head-dress and the wristlet-warm, attest
Its merits rare.

Mrs. Possons doth
Hereby request that all who would defend Themselves, their children, or their friends, against
The wintry blast, with plain or variegated
Knitted wear, must best leave orders at her
Trimming store, sixty-six Genesee street
Ere time shall call you a New Year to greet.

—SIMPSON'S COURTSHIP.

This was finally agreed upon; and accordingly, as soon as he had finished his business in the city, Mr. Puckford, previous to returning home, called on Mr. Simpson. He found him in a state of great excitement, which, however, gradually calmed down after Mr. Puckford's solemn assurance, which he gave unhesitatingly, that the charming Mary Fortescue was certainly disengaged; and, in his opinion, by no means indisposed to entertain an eligible matrimonial proposition. All this was balm to the stricken Simpson; and after several failures, he at last succeeded in indicting a formal offer of his hand and fortune to the lady of his affection; of which impassioned missive Mrs. Puckford was to be the bearer; her husband undertaking that she would exert all her eloquence and influence to secure acceptance of the proposal.

"And now, Mr. Puckford," said Mr. Simpson, "we'll have a glass of wine, and drink the future Mrs. Simpson's health. What a charming ornament," he added, with a sort of rapturous sigh, as he placed the decanter on the table—"what a charming ornament she would be to this fireplace?"

"An odd expression, that?" thought Mr. Puckford, forgetting that the speaker was an ironmonger and dealt in such articles. In fact, from the way in which Simpson had been rapturizing upon Miss Fortescue's charms, a doubt of his friend's perfect sanity had sprung up in John Puckford's mind, and he shrewdly suspected that the affair would terminate in a de lunatico inquirendo instead of a license.

"Do you know, Puckford," said Mr. Simpson, with a benevolent, patronizing air, after the third and fourth glass—"do you know, I fancy there is a great likeness between you and Mary Fortescue?"

Mr. John Puckford, the reader must understand, was a handsome young man, with a brilliant florid complexion, perfectly agreeing vision, and light brown hair. No wonder therefore, he was more startled than flattered by the comparison. The color mounted to his temples, and a conviction of Simpson's utter insanity flashed across his brain. "Mad as a march hare!" he mentally ejaculated; at the same time resolving, should the paroxysm grow dangerously violent, to knock him down with one of the decanters; both of which, as two could play at that game, he drew, as if in doubt which wine he would take to his own side of the table. Mr. Simpson, mistaking the nature of his friend's emotion, added, "Don't suppose, Puckford, I intend any absurd flattery?"

"Not at all, Simpson; I didn't suppose anything of the sort, I assure you."

"To be sure; nothing is more contemptible. You are a good looking fellow—very; but of course I could not mean that you, a man, are to be compared to Mary Fortescue."

"I should think not!" dryly responded the more mystified and bewildered Puckford.

"Exactly; you do not resemble each other about the eyes, either in color or expression."

"Oh?"

"No; as to hair, continued Mr. Simpson, meditatively, "yours, there can be no doubt, is decidedly the lightest."

"It's coming, now," thought Mr. John Puckford, grasping, at the same time, one of the decanters, and eyeing his friend intensely.

Mr. Simpson, quite misinterpreting the action, added quickly, "Do, my good fellow, fill me a bumper, and we'll drink our good-looking friend's health—the lady, I mean, with the dark, silky hair and brunette complexion. "Do you know," continued the complacent Mr. Simpson, crossing his legs, throwing himself back easily in his chair and hooking his thumbs to the armholes of his waistcoat—"do you know that if Mary Fortescue had not been at your house yesterday evening, I might have—"

What the worthy ironmonger might, in the case supposed, have done or said, must be left to the reader's imagination, for on the instant a clerk hurriedly entered the apartment to announce that an important customer awaited Mr. Simpson in the counting-house below. Hastily rising, Mr. Simpson shook hands with his friend, and both departed their several ways—Mr. Puckford bearing off the epistle addressed to Miss Fortescue, and musing as he went upon the lover's madness, which, he fully agreed with Rosalind, deserved chains and a dark house quite as much as any other variety of the disease.

The next day, Mr. Simpson received a note from Mary Fortescue, modestly and gracefully expressed, in which, with charming humility, and many expressions of gratified surprise, the offer of his hand was—on one condition, to be explained, but which rested altogether with himself—gratefully accepted.

Such was the state of affairs when, on the 1st of March, Mr. Simpson, as I have before stated, entered a Broughman and directed the driver to make the best of his way to Mile End.

It was a fine, bright and exceedingly cold day; but notwithstanding the nipping, eager air, the love-lorn ironmonger, as he approached the house which contained his charmer, was in a state of profuse perspiration and nervous excitement. Once more he drew from his pocket the fairy note and glanced over the modest, grateful, delicately feminine expressions.—"Dear lady," he audibly exclaimed, as he finished about the five hundredth perusal of the familiar lines, "dear lady, she will be all tears and tenderness!"

About a minute after giving utterance to this consolatory reflection, Mr. Simpson found himself in Mrs. Puckford's presence, who, congratulating him on his punctuality and pointing to the door of the front apartment, said, "There is only one lady there, and you know her." Mr. Simpson's heart leaped and thumped, as if desirous of bursting through his green velvet waistcoat. He stepped desperately toward the door and essayed to turn the brass handle; but so profusely did the bashful man's very fingers perspire, that they slipped round the knob without turning it. The second trial, with the help of his cambric handkerchief, was more successful, and the lover was in the presence of the lady.

Certainly it was she. Mrs. Frazier, the hapless Simpson's Mary Fortescue, was there in bodily reality. But the grateful humility, the "tears and tenderness," prefigured by the charming note! Oh, Alfred Gray!

The unruffled ease, the calm, reserved politeness with which Mrs. Frazier received him, chilled his enthusiastic fervor wonderfully.

His perspiration became a cold one, and in a few moments he felt as if enveloped in coatings and leggins of Wenham Lake ice. Recovering as speedily as he could from the shock of this unexpectedly chilling reception, Mr. Simpson stammered forth something about his extreme good fortune in having obtained a favorable response from so amiable a person, etc.

"Certainly," replied the lady; "I think you are very fortunate, Mr. Simpson." And by the way of saying something particularly civil, and to relieve the modest man's embarassment, she added: "But few men have, like you, sufficient discrimination to discern and appreciate attractions which lie hidden from the merely superficial observer."

Poor Simpson gasped for breath! He was literally dumbfounded! Here was modest gratitude, to say nothing of tears and tenderness" with a vengeance.

Miss Fortescue, with a precarious salary of some twenty pounds per annum, exclusive of bread and butter, was, in her own opinion, conferring a tremendous obligation on a civic dignitary worth at least twenty thousand pounds, by accepting him for a husband! That was quite clear; and although Mr. Simpson was too much in love to deny such a proposition in the abstract, still it was, he thought scarcely consistent with maiden modesty to state it so very broadly.

Notwithstanding his amazement, Mr. Simpson, as soon as he recovered his breath, continued, so well had he studied for the occasion, to get out a sentence or two about the superiority of connubial to single blessedness. This sentiment also met with ready acquiescence

"Oh, dear, yes," said Mrs. Frazier; "I would not have been an old maid for the world!"

Prospectus for 1873.—Sixth Year:

The Aldine,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

Not for Sale in Book or News Stores.

"THE ALDINE," while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest, characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original enterprise—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other single or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos besides

ART DEPARTMENT.

Notwithstanding the increase in the price of subscription last fall, when THE ALDINE assumed its present noble proportions and representative character, the edition was more than doubled during the past year, proving that the American public appreciate, and will support, a sincere effort in the cause of Art. The publishers, anxious to justify the ready confidence thus demonstrated, have exerted themselves to the utmost to develop and improve the work: and the plans for the coming year, as unfolded by the monthly Issues, will astonish and delight even the most sanguine friends of THE ALDINE.

The publishers are authorized to announce designs from many of the most eminent artists of America.

In addition, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest; avoiding such as have become familiar through photographs, or copies of any kind.

The quarterly tinted plates, for 1873, will reproduce four of John S. Davis' inimitable child-sketches, appropriate to the four seasons. These plates, appearing in the issues for January, April, July and October, would be alone worth the price of a year's subscription.

The popular feature of a copiously illustrated "Christmas" number will be continued.

To possess such a valuable epitome of the art world at a cost so trifling, will command the subscriptions of thousands in every section of the country; but, as the usefulness and attractions of THE ALDINE can be enhanced, in proportion to the numerical increase of its supporters, the publishers propose to make "assurance doubly sure," by the following unparalleled offer of

Premium Chromos for 1873

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1873, will receive without additional charge, a pair of beautiful oil chromos: after J. J. Hill, the eminent English painter. The pictures, entitled "The Village Belle," and "Crossing the Moor," are 14x20 inches—are printed from 25 different plates, requiring 25 impressions and tints to perfect each picture. The same chromos are sold for $30 per pair in the art stores. As it is the determination of its conductors to keep THE ALDINE out of the reach of competition in every department, the chromos will be found correspondingly ahead of any that can be offered by other periodicals. Every subscriber will receive a certificate over the signature of the publishers, guaranteeing that the chromos delivered shall be equal to the samples furnished the agent, or the money will be refunded. The distribution of pictures of this grade, free to the subscribers to a five dollar periodical, will mark an epoch in the history of Art; and, considering the unprecedented cheapness of the price for THE ALDINE itself, the marvel falls little short of a miracle, even to those best acquainted with the achievements of inventive genius and improved mechanical appliances. (For illustrations of these chromos, see November issue of THE ALDINE.)

The Literary Department

will continue under the care of MR. RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, assisted by the best writers and poets of the day, who will strive to have the literature of THE ALDINE always in keeping with its artistic attractions.

Terms.

$5 per annum in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

THE ALDINE will hereafter be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton & Co.

THE publishers of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY, in their Prospectus just issued promise for the coming year a more brilliant array of contributors, and an improvement in the variety and beauty of its illustrations, already accredited by the critics to be finer than any which appeared in any American Magazine.

Dr. Holland, the Editor, will write the serial story of the year, which will be autobiographical in form, and will be illustrated by Miss Hallock. It is entitled Arthur Bonnicastle, and will deal with some of the most difficult problems of American Life. It will be commenced in the November Number.

There will be a new story by Saxe Holm, The One Legged Dancers.

Bret Harte, the best writer of short stories now living, will contribute a characteristic story, entitled The Epic of Fiddletown, which will be illustrated by Sheppard.

R. H. Stoddard will write a series of entertaining papers about Authors their Personal Characteristics, Home Life, Families, Friends, Whims, and Ways. A series of Portraits of Living American Writers, is also promised.

Clarence Cook will write about Furniture, and the Decoration of American Homes. These papers will be eminently practical as well as artistic, and will be illustrated with designs and sketches by numerous artists in addition to those which the writer himself will furnish.

Among those who will contribute are:

Hans Anderson, Bryant, Bushnell, Eggleston, Fenelon, Hopkinson, Bishop Huntington, Bret Harte, John Hay, H. H. Boudinot, Mitchell, Miss Phelps Gowman, Saxton, Stoddard, Celia Thaxter, Warner Wilkinson, Mrs. Whitney, besides a host of others.

The editorial control and direction of the Magazine will remain in the hands of Dr. Holland, who will continue to write "The Topics of the Time," which the N. Y. Independent says are more widely quoted than any similar papers in any American magazine."

Watson Gailer will write "The Old Cabinet;" as children, Prof. John C. Draper conducts the department of "Nature and Science;" The departments of "Home and Society," and "Culture and Progress," will engage the contributions of more than a score of pens on both sides of the Atlantic. The Watchman and Reflector says: "Scribner's Monthly for September is better than usual, which indicates a needless waste of editorial brains and Publisher's money, for the Magazine was good enough before." And yet the Publishers promise to make it still better for the coming year!

The subscription price is $4.00 a year, with special rates to Clergymen, Teachers, and Postmasters.

The following

Extraordinary Inducements

are offered to new subscribers:

For $5.50 the publishers will send, or any Bookseller or Newsdealer will supply the magazine for one year, and the twelve numbers of Vols. III. and IV., containing the beginning of Mrs. Oliphant's Serial; "It Was a Lover and His Lass;" for $7.50, the Magazine for one year, and the 24 back numbers bound (4 vols.), charges on bound vols. paid. This will give nearly 5000 pages of the choicest reading, with the finest illustrations, for $10.50 or nearly 500 pages, for a dollar! and will enable every subscriber to obtain the series from the first.
