A QUIET FOURTH.

Independence day will not be celebrated with any great vehemence in Auburn this year. The services in the churches will be patriotic in character to-morrow and on Monday there will be a number of amusements offered for the patronage of the public. There will be a field day for the benefit of St. Mary's church at the fair grounds, a game of ball between the Auburn and Cortland clubs at Norwood and the People's club celebration at Lakeside park.

The fireworks which are to be used by the People's club at Lakeside park Monday are a novelty. They are known as daylight fireworks and the idea of using them was conceived by S. C. Tallman. About $100 has been subscribed by merchants and business men and there are six dozen designs. A ball is shot into the air and when this gets up a distance of several hundred feet it explodes and there issues forth paper figures. Several of the shells were tried this morning and worked perfectly showing many ludicrous figures.

DR. GREEN INJURED.

Dr. George W. Green met with a painful accident this morning. Dr. Green has a cherry tree in the rear of his residence No. 45 East Genesee street and this morning was picking the cherries. He raised a ladder to against the tree and rested the end on a decayed limb. The limb would not bear his weight and he fell to the ground. He struck on his right side. He was taken into the house and Drs. C. W. House, W. S. Cheesman and F. M. Hyatt were called. The hip was not broken but the joint which is a ball and socket was painfully bruised.

JUMPED A BOARD BILL.

John Fitzgerald was arrested in Syracuse to-day by Officer Graney on a warrant charging him with a misdemeanor in skipping a board bill. The complaint was made by Clarissa E. Johnson, who alleges that Fitzgerald failed to pay her $4.50 for board which was due her. He was arraigned but no plea was taken and his case was set down for Monday. Fitzgerald had just been released from the Onondaga county penitentiary when Officer Graney arrested him.

DIDN'T HAVE A BELL.

George Brown was arrested this afternoon charged with a violation of the bicycle ordinance by the special officer, in riding on the sidewalk without a bell. He was arraigned and his case was set down for July 7, until which time he was admitted to bail.

WILL FIGHT TO-NIGHT.

Unless something unforseen happens the fight at the Genesee Opera house will be pulled off this evening, as has been scheduled. The principal "go" of the evening is a 20 round go between Eddie Daily and Walter Hardman. Both are said to be hard hitting, fast fighters and the "go" promises to be a good one. There will be one or two preliminaries, the principal one being a 10 round bout between "Chip" Clark, the fast First ward boy, and a pug named Bellmer, of Union Springs.

AGAINST BON FIRES.

A complaint was made at police headquarters this afternoon from citizens of the Five Corners. The people are afraid of the gang of young fellows who celebrate the ever glorious by bon fires in which everything that is combustible is burned. It is thought that this Fourth will be celebrated with a fire and there will be trouble for the celebrators if they do.

INVITATION TO M'KINLEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—The committee appointed by the Republicans of San Francisco, Los Mateo and Santa Barbara counties met last night and drew up a memorial to President McKinley urging him to visit this coast after the adjournment of the present session of Congress. The invitation suitably illuminated will be framed in California wood before being forwarded to Washington.

THE SCHOOL TEACHERS.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The New York State Teachers' convention met this morning at the Normal college and although the exercises consisted wholly of official business, the assembly hall was well filled. The retiring President, Dr. Charles E. White, of the Franklin school, Syracuse, N. Y., presented his successor, Dr. James Lee, in a very neat speech in which he paid high praise to the local organization of New York.

WHIRLED TO HIS DEATH.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., July 3.—Edward McPherson, aged 35, an employe at Remington's paper mill, this city, was caught in a belt at the mill this morning and whirled to his death. Both arms and legs were broken and his body was badly mangled.

The early English and French kings took "moneyers" with them on their travels who coined money as it was needed.

Charles Emory Smith, the editor of the Philadelphia Press, and Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, will be among the speakers at the Republican League convention in Detroit next month.

FELL 30 FEET.

John McCarthy Had a Narrow Escape from Death To-day.

John McCarthy, an apprentice in the employ of James C. Stoddard, met with a painful accident this morning. McCarthy was at work on the ventilator on the roof of the new building which is being constructed for the American Cordage company in Cottage street. There were several small weak boards which were nailed across the ventilator merely for stays. McCarthy stepped on one of these boards and it gave way. He fell to the ground a distance of about 30 feet. The bottom of the building was strewn with planks and boards but fortunately McCarthy had no bones broken. He was rendered unconscious by the fall and it was first thought he was injured internally. Dr. William S. Cheesman was called and the boy was removed to the hospital where he was given careful attention.

This afternoon it was learned from the hospital that he was now seriously hurt, his injuries consisting of bruises only.

WHEN MR. LEWIS ENTERS.

Two Doors Admit the Visitor, and the Senate Chamber Is Impressed.

The character of the present congress is J. Hamilton Lewis. He is a character not to be comprehended all at once. He grows upon you. It takes some time to realize how strange he is. His extravagance of dress and his attitude first attract attention. When he enters the house, no matter what is doing, every eye instinctively turns toward him, like the eyes of the audience in a theater to the leading man when he breaks through the throng of minor actors.

Mr. Lewis visits the senate frequently. There is nothing more dramatic than his entrance into the presence of that august body. He never by any chance enters through one of the side doors. The senate may be engaged in a heated debate or deeply absorbed in a bewildering schedule of the tariff bill. Suddenly a sense of something happening comes upon every one. People in the galleries look down, and the interest of the senate is arrested. Both the swinging doors of the main entrance at the head of the center aisle, facing the vice president, swing open, and Mr. Lewis appears. The doors close behind him, and he stands for a moment under the archway, his hat and gloves held in one hand in front of him, and looks toward the vice president with a slight inclination of the head, as much as to say, Do not let me interrupt you. Then he looks with a sweeping glance to the right and to the left, slightly inclining his body. He then straightens himself up and sweeps the galleries with a glance. By this time every eye is upon him, and, with the graceful, dainty steps of a dancing master, he walks over to the Democratic side of the chamber, greeting in the most graceful manner imaginable each senator who happens to be in his path to the vacant seat he is making for. His manner of greeting is to shift his hat and gloves from his right hand to his left with a flourish, taking two steps forward, as if about to swing partners in the lancers, and then to extend his right hand, at the same time inclining his body gracefully and giving his hat a great sweep by his side, as the ideal cavalier trails his plume to the ground in bowing to "my lady." It would be impossible for him to enter into any presence without attracting attention, and apparently he has no intention of trying to do so.

With his fluffy hair and whiskers, both parted in the middle, he looks like some of the portraits of Captain John Smith of about the time when he is supposed to have excited the imagination of the impressionable Indian maiden. Instead of the glittering trappings of a knight, his dress is a display of the highest skill of the tailor, setting off his slender form in all its graceful lines and clinging to him with an affectionate softness. His every movement tends in a posture, and with a gentle undulation he passes from one posture to another. His voice is music and his words flow like poetry, being reeled off 220 words to the minute.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Gleeman.

The word "gleeman" signifies "joyman," or one who sung of joys. Doubtless the gleeman's "musical wood" rang through the scale of both joy and sorrow.

The gleeman was in earliest times not only the master musician, he was the philosopher, historian, prophet and poet of his age. He could hold civil dignities such as the government of a province or of an important city. But when Christianity was introduced the gleemen were hated by the clergy and looked upon as rebels. Their duty later on was to sing the praise of their patron, to attend him and play whenever required by the courtiers or by himself. So that after a time the gleeman who stood next in the king in dignity became in the end an obsequious dependant, flatterer and parasite. Those who did not like the court wandered about. These wandering bards were little better than mendicants playing from house to house for a night's lodging.

Often the Saxon gleeman sang the famous genealogy of his patron, the family traditions and connections. After dinner, when there were "song and music together and the wood of joy was touched," he sang these topics to the assembled feasters. The following names applied to the Saxon gleeman will indicate how many roles he could play: Poet, harper, pantomimist, tumbler, fancy jester, ribald player, juggler and mimic. Here is variety enough and to spare, but in all these roles he was first of all a musician.—Westminster Review.

A Story of Verdi.

A story is told of Verdi touching his kindness to those around him. For some time past he has been staying in Genoa, at his palace in the Via Andrea Doria. A few days ago, while out driving, a man approached his carriage and begged to be allowed to speak. The man turned out to be the director of an obscure troop of performers from Java, who were about to commence a series of performances at the Alfieri theater, Genoa. The director, Signor Bernard, summoned up courage to beg the great maestro to attend a special representation which his troop desired to give in his honor. Verdi accepted the invitation and immediately drove to the Alfieri theater, to which no one but he was admitted. He listened with great attention to the primitive orchestra and watched the fabrication by the troop of various objects. A Java woman offered him a silk pocket handkerchief as a present and embroidered it for him in gold in his presence. Upon leaving the theater Verdi said to Signor Bernard, "I thank you infinitely for the pleasant half hour which you have enabled me to pass, and I wish good fortune to you all." The Java troop were highly delighted with the honor paid them by the greatest of living Italian composers.
