CHAPTER 24

Reviewing The Troops

The Saturday slated to end the game of North, South, East and West was a blue and gold and resplendent notable for cloudless skies and a horrible exodus of citizens from New York over the spectacle of these streaming millions embarking for the country to participate joyously in sun-burn and mosquito bites, the perpetrator of this chronic purpose to draw a merciful veil. It is his intention, rather, to leap chamomile like over the intervening hours and arrive at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Pausing at this witching hour to review the troops, as it were, we first find that classy and diletante-ish gentleman, Mr. Van Ripper Harkness, parking his snooty Isotta-Franchini before the apartment house of Miss Dorothy South. The appearance and mien of Mr. Harkness were of the lightest. A flower flowered in his buttonhole, and a song trembled on his lips. In fact, though Mr. Harkness was not aware of it, his demeanor was comparable to that of a lamu frisking on the fringes of a wolf-haunted forest.

The reason such a comparison is tenable was the presence of an unobtrusive sedan parked across the street from Miss South's apartment house. Occupying the front seat of this vehicle were two gentlemen who had been watching the progress of Mr. Harkness with considerable interest. As he disappeared into the house the man behind the wheel, a short, powerfully-built individual, spat professionally out of the window of the car, took off his gray felt hat and fanned himself with it.

"Wul, dere he goes," observed Mr. Ape Coletti. "Wot's next, gur'nor?"

In the seat beside him Chiseler Jennings made a gesture of annoyance.

"You have your orders, Coletti," he said testily. "Wait till they come out. They follow that car. And meanwhile, you'll oblige me by keeping silent. I want to think."

"Sposin' I lose it?" inquired Mr. Coletti. "In no humor to oblige."

"Lose what?" said the Chiseler vaguely.

"Why, de car," explained Mr. Coletti, surprised at having to plumb the ABCs. "Dat hoty-toisy joy-wagon over dere at de colb. S'posin'..."

The Chiseler flung an irritated arm heavenward.

"Why is it," he moaned, "that I have to undertake a mission like this accompanied by a spial-footed Wop with a head full of saw-dust? You're a fool, Coletti. Now stop supposing and shut up. As for the car, don't lose it."

At this point the figures of Miss Dorothy South and Mr. Van Harkness appeared in the lighted entrance of the apartment house. The Chiseler's left hand gripped Coletti's knee hard. In silence, they gazed across the street.

So far as could be seen over the width of the thoroughfare, Miss South was garbed with a view to participation in gala proceedings. A black evening gown of the clinging variety enveloped her svelte figure. The upper portion of this garment was concealed by a white coat of operatic aspect, Miss South clutched its folds about her as she climbed hastily into the Isotta. Her mood, too, appeared to be in keeping with the gala. A trill of silvery laughter reached the ears of Coletti and the Chiseler. Then Harkness was up beside her and the Isotta glided off in the direction of the East River.

The Chiseler nodded approvingly.

"Smart girl, Dorothy," he stated. "A consummate actress. She

SUMMER AND EARLY-FALL STYLE

PATTERN 2202

by Anna Murray

There are both summer and early-fall styles in this amazing Anne Adams Pattern, 2184. For summer, you'll make it up as a sunnier frock in linen or cotton. When the leaves turn color, use it to make a smart jumper frock in a heavier checked or plaid fabric, cut perhaps on the bias. The scalloped necklines, low in back, is new and becoming. Make the belt run all around... use it stitched in and out of the front waistline darts and tied in front... or omit it entirely. There's a jaunty contrasting bolero for the summer dress and a puffed-sleeved blouse to wear beneath the jumper.

Pattern 2184 is available in Junior and misses' sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18; bust size 28, 30, 32, 34 and 36. Size 14 jumper, takes 2 1/2 yards 35 inch fabric and bolero, 1 yard contrast. PICKUP has brains, Coletti. Which is more than I can say for one of the sons of your old man."

He broke off and glared at Coletti who, as yet, had done nothing constructive toward keeping the Isotta in view. Well, come on, you dumb glumey. Get going. What are you, planted here?"

Thus admonished he Ape made a wild dive for mechanisms. His feet trod on starter and clutch almost simultaneously and his right hand shot toward the gear shift. The sedan bounced away from the curb with a bananee-like screech.

Before setting back in his seat, the Chiseler permitted himself one more comment.

"That's right, dear," he said glibly. "Strip the gears! All we need now is for you to put the car on the blink."

Jumbo, The Weight Maker

It now falls to the unhappy lot of this chronicler to report a perfectly sickening conversation that took place between two moon-struck members of the younger generation on that popular Long Island highway known as the Jericho Turnpike.

Jumbo: Darling!

Luella: Yes Angel-Pie.

Jumbo: I can hardly believe it, sweetness. I think I must be dreaming.

Luella: You're not dreaming, lambo. It's true. Love your Luella!

Jumbo: Boy, do I!

Luella: How much?

Jumbo: This much.

(Business of stopping car. Business of monkey business. Pause. Long Pause. Discreet Pause.)

Luella (finally): Oughtn't we be settling on, sweetheart?

Jumbo: I don't want to go any place. I'm in Heaven right now.

Luella: But the—the party?

Jumbo: Oh, yes, the party. I forgot about the party. Love me, honey?

Luella: Uh-huh.

MONDAY MORNING NEWS SUMMARY TODAY IN SENATE

By RONALD G. VANTINE United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 5.—(UP)—The Senate decides today whether to restore President Roosevelt's power to further devalue the dollar.

The definitive show-down in the struggle between the chief executive and the Senate comes at 1 P. M. (6 p. m. EDT) when the Senate votes on a conference report which would restore the sections of the monetary bill the Senate originally killed.

The report, in addition to re-establishing the dollar devaluation authority, also would continue the $2,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund and set a guaranteed price for domestically mined silver.

Republicans and conservative Democrats filibustered Friday night to prevent a vote then on the conference report. The dollar devaluation authority and the stabilization fund as contained in old law therefore died at midnight with the expiration of last fiscal year.

Mr. Roosevelt returns from a holiday week-end at Hyde Park this morning and was expected to meet his congressional leaders before the Senate begins debate.

The administration was believed to hold a slight advantage. Sen. Key Pittman, D., Nev., and some other silver senators were expected to vote for the conference report. A coalition of silver as a voters, anti-administration Democrats and Republicans voted against the dollar devaluation authority last week. If the report is voted down the silver senators stand to lose because the domestic silver price will fall along with the stabilization fund and the dollar authority.

If the vote accepts the report, the Treasury will buy domestic silver at 71 cents an ounce for two years, and purchases of foreign silver will be continued at the world market price.

If the Senate refuses to accept the report, the dollar devaluation authority ends, the stabilization fund reverts to the Treasury's general fund, the artificially-supported domestic silver price drops to the world market level, and purchases of foreign silver cease. New legislation would be required to restore any of them.

There still was doubt of the legality of the Senate's power to revive the monetary power and the stabilization fund without new legislation.

Attorney General Frank Murphy contends that adoption of the conference report would revive those powers. Sen. Alva B. Adams (D.-Col.), a leader of the opposing coalition, agreed.

The Treasury was expected to set a silver price today pending Senate action.

Despite the uncertainties of other monetary legislation, the Silver Purchase Act which authorizes the secretary of the treasury to buy domestic or foreign silver in such quantity and at such a price as he deems in the public interest still remained a law. Attorneys believe the statute is sufficiently broad to permit Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., to set two silver prices, one for domestic and one for foreign silver.

Before the monetary powers expired, the Treasury had been buying domestic silver at 44.64 cents an ounce and foreign silver at the world market—42 cents. Since then foreign silver has slipped to 38 cents and the purchase of domestic metal was suspended automatically by the long holiday week-end.
