

Democrats see Lindsay in trouble with 'regulars'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic leaders in states across the country say New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, although an attractive candidate, will have trouble gaining the support of party regulars.

An Associated Press survey of a dozen states that will hold presidential primaries showed many party leaders felt Lindsay, a Democrat only since August, had joined up too late and was entering the race too late to head off the frontrunners.

Others, however, pointed to Lindsay's status as a spokesman for the cities and his support among voters who characterize themselves as independents.

Lindsay, who officially announced his candidacy last Tuesday in Miami, will skip the first primary in New Hampshire on March 9, but has already entered the contests in Florida March 14 and Wisconsin April 4.

In West Virginia, state Democratic Chairman Rudolph DiTrapano said he doubted whether the Democratic organization "would be inclined to give Lindsay much support, since he has just recently been baptized."

"I view his candidacy as a waste of time," declared Massachusetts Democratic state chairman Charles F. Flaherty. He said although the 50-year-old New Yorker "could probably do fairly well" in this state, the field is already dominated by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and George McGovern of South Dakota.

In Wisconsin, State Senate Minority Leader Fred Risser said Lindsay "might do quite well here, but I don't anticipate him winning the state."

"He certainly is an attractive candidate," said Wisconsin Assembly Speaker-designate Norman Anderson, adding that Lindsay's switch of parties might appeal to the state's tradition of favoring independents.

Texas Gov. Preston Smith, titular head of the state Democratic Party, said he does not think Lindsay is being "considered as too much of a factor in the party, at least in Texas."

"My main feeling," said Hess Dyas, Nebraska state Democratic chairman, "is that we've got so many capable people who've been in the party all this time that we really don't need him."

New York Assembly Minority Leader Stanley Steingut called Lindsay's candidacy "very interesting." Other New York assemblymen said the mayor's status as spokesman for the cities would enhance his campaign.

But another New York Democrat, State Sen. Manfred Ohrenstein, said Lindsay, who was campaigning around the country, had neglected to mend his political fences at home. "He has left his political base in New York in disarray," he declared.

Some party leaders, like Jon Moyle, chairman of the Florida Democratic Executive Committee, declined to comment on any of the candidates before the primaries.

But Moyle did predict that Lindsay "will have a tough battle if he's going to make a good showing in Florida."

An Indiana party leader, Mayor-elect Ivan Ebanoff of Fort Wayne, declared: "I emotionally, philosophically and politically support Lindsay."

First Lady attends Liberia inauguration

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Cannons boomed over the ocean at dawn today to start Inauguration Day for William Tolbert, grandson of an American slave and the new president of Liberia.

America's first lady, Pat Nixon, was the top-ranking guest for the ceremonies— from oath taking and inaugural address to a three-hour parade of celebration and an inaugural ball lasting until midnight.

On inaugural eve, capping a 12-hour first day in Liberia, Mrs. Nixon sat down Sunday night for a private talk with Tolbert that she said would be "substantive."

Aides did not disclose what they talked about during their half-hour session in the executive mansion.

Mrs. Nixon, heading the U.S. delegation to the inaugural, looked a bit wiled after a day in which she was given 19-gun welcoming salute, waved at thousands on an hour-long motorcade from the airport into Monrovia, met Liberian officials at a champagne reception, held a coffee session with the press and went to a hot, crowded 80-minute afternoon church service that launched the inaugural activities.

Evangelist Billy Graham, a member of the U.S. delegation, was among the participants in the ecumenical service in the small, whitewashed stone First Providence Baptist church.

Graham in a prayer of thanksgiving said Liberia may never become an economic or military superpower. But he prayed that under its new leader the country "will become a spiritual superpower that will show nations of the world the way to peace and prosperity through the transformation of the human heart."

The weather was torrid in the West African capital, and Mrs. Nixon changed from the red, white and blue print she arrived in to a cool, long-sleeved yellow and white linen for the afternoon.

She called her welcome "fabulous," from the crowds to the native dancers. "They all seemed so happy," she commented. "It's really a treat to see fun-loving people."

Monrovia was on a holiday schedule, with banners welcoming Mrs. Nixon and congratulating the new president. Crowds stood around the $5 million, eight-story presidential mansion, with its huge oval courtyard and blue-tiled lagoons, where much of the activity was centered.

Along with Tolbert's inauguration, Liberia is celebrating the 150th anniversary of its founding in 1822 by freed American slaves.

The new president is a 58-year-old Baptist minister who was President William V. S. Tubman's vice president for 19 years. Tubman died last July after 27 years in office.

Mrs. Nixon was occupying the presidential suite on the top floor that will be Tolbert's after he is sworn in. She was the first to use it, and pronounced it "absolutely beautiful" and the view of the sea "impressive."

At her press session in a marble reception room of the building, Mrs. Nixon said her husband wanted this to be "a meaningful trip, not just a social trip." She added that she would talk with the leaders of three African countries on her tour— Liberia, Ghana and the Ivory Coast— on any subjects they want to discuss.

"I might ask some questions, too," she added with a chuckle.

She had no trouble fielding a question from one reporter who recalled a photo of the Nixons with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and asked her how she viewed President Nixon's trip to Peking next month.

"Well, we haven't turned our back on our friends, that's for sure," she replied. She noted that the United States didn't vote to expel Nationalist China from the United Nations although "other countries did."

"We certainly consider them friends that we're not going to leave by the roadside," she continued, "but it's terribly important to get to know the Chinese people."

Pointing out that they comprise one-fourth of the world's population, she said: "We've got to start a dialogue to get some understanding of each other's position so that we can talk rather than fight."

Denmark's King Frederik in hospital

COPENHAGEN (AP) — King Frederik IX of Denmark suffered a heart attack today and was rushed to a hospital, the royal court announced.

The king, who is 72, came down with influenza on New Year's Eve, and was reported to have developed mild pneumonia on Saturday. However, a spokesman said Sunday that he was rapidly improving.

The announcement today described the heart attack as acute but gave no further information.

Queen Ingrid and Princess Margrethe, the 32-year-old heirress to the throne, drove to the Municipal Hospital behind the ambulance which took the king.

The monarch looked old, tired and ill when he made his traditional radio-television broadcast on New Year's Eve from the Amalienborg palace. He went to bed immediately afterward.

Zany questions

By IRENE KEENEY and ANDREA RUTHERFORD
Kulcherbocker News-Union Star

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — At this time of the year, Action Line editors across the country are sharing some of the zany questions they have received from their readers.

Some of them are gems, and they follow.

Q—HELP! I'm trying to find my friend who works for a construction company somewhere. I did find out that it isn't in Watertown, N.Y. like I thought. This is awfully important to me and I know you're the one to find my long lost friend. — E.B.

Q—I was born Feb. 22, the same day George Washington was born. Now that they're changing his birthday and celebrating it on a Monday every year does that mean that I should celebrate mine on that day too?

Q—Is it true that when a person over 50 is reported missing the police don't bother to look for them? Why?

Q—When I received my GasLife and Water bill I notice that in the left hand corner it states "Return Postage Guaranteed." Does this mean that I can mail it in without an eight cent postage stamp?

Q—I moved here four months ago and they don't have my favorite brand of instant coffee. I planned to be here a long time, but now I'm going to have to move again. — V.M.

Q—We're being evaded by rats. — S.A.C.

Q—I have a blue female Persian cat and I'm looking for a blue female Persian stud.

Q—I'm on welfare and I'd like a couch for my husband to lay around on. — B.S.

Q—I got a 14-carat gold heart-shaped diamond necklace by sending in a Bazooka bubble gum wrapped and I don't think it's genuine. — N.M.

Q—What is the cause of living in Georgia? — G.G.

Q—My husband has come down with something called habes corpus. — L.N.

Q—They said they'd loan money even if you didn't have any credit. I don't have any credit so I went down there. Then they come up with this thing about having to have a steady job. I think it's false advertising. — A.A.

Q—Yesterday I saw a Lincoln Continental with a "Ma Bell is a Cheap Mother" bumper sticker. If Ma Bell is so cheap where did he get the Continental? — F.J.

Q—I understand there's a degradation of pollution experts coming to town next month. — R.A.

Q—Several months ago my husband purchased a Mooreart Fulcrumatic Dual-Efficiency Cleaning Appliance from a traveling salesman who claimed to be a retired minister. It's a $7.50 refillable sponge mop. — Mrs. A.W.M.

Q—I want to see a psychiatrist because I'm losing my memorandum. — E.T.

Q—Some tenants have moved away and left their old bodies. They're sitting out there with no wheels on them. — P.S.

Q—Please put me in touch with a professional bird watcher. I've got quite a bird in my backyard and I think it warrants watching. — Mrs. C.B.

Q—Could you please to tell us what to do to get rid of marlins? They fly by the hundreds every evening and take over the trees. You can hardly sit in the back yard. — Mrs. F.B.

Q—I called in yesterday to have a question answered on getting rid of birds. I think I said marlins, but I meant sparrows. Sorry. — Mrs. B.
