PLAN TO OPEN BUILDING FEB. 1
New Henry M. Sanders Laboratory Construction Being Pushed
AVAILABLE FOR NEW TERM
To Contain Special Equipment For Study of Physics
The opening day of the second semester, February 1, will find the Henry M. Sanders Laboratory of Physics, the latest addition to the Vassar College campus, ready for use. Although the building is not yet completed, Edgar V. Anderson, the general contractor expects it to be so far advanced by the beginning of the month that most of the equipment of the department can be installed at that time and the new term classes held there.
The laboratory, which is being built largely from the bequest of Dr. Henry M. Sanders, is designed as a companion to the Sanders Chemistry Laboratory, and stands near it, a little to the rear of the Vassar Brothers building, the present home of the department of physics. It resembles the former structure closely, with the exception of being slightly smaller. The architects, Ewing and Allen, planned both edifices. The three main floors and several attics are connected by elevators for the transport of the heavy machinery. Besides the large laboratories and smaller rooms for advanced study, there are four lecture halls. There is also a shop over which a trained mechanic is to preside, who will keep the equipment in running order.
This apparatus includes a Foucault pendulum, a polar heliostat, given in memory of Irene Bell Robinson, and equipment for the study of radio, X-ray and photography. The most delicate instruments are mounted on concrete pillars whose bases are grounded in the foundations and which are isolated from the flooring and walls to prevent the jar of the building from affecting them.
Hot and cold water, gas and compressed air are available in all parts of the laboratory. The electric power is supplied by a special motor generator and a 36-volt storage battery in the building, which supplement the current from the college power plant.

ADJUSTMENTS URGED BY MOTOR BUREAU
Officials Say Certificate Fails To Prove Headlights Focused Properly
According to word received in this city Saturday from the Bureau of Motor Vehicles a headlight adjusting certificate is evidence that the holder has had his lamps adjusted on a certain date and is not proof that the lights are still in proper adjustment. The bureau has decided that inasmuch as most headlamps will not stay adjusted for any considerable length of time, one adjustment will not be sufficient for a season. In the communication the bureau further said that it appeared as though in a majority of cases the headlamps will need examination in 1926.

DR. BOND SPEAKS AT M. E. CHURCH

The revival meetings that have been held at the church will be continued during the coming week and the Rev. Dr. George A. MacDonald, district superintendent of the Methodist Church, will be the speaker Thursday night.

VASSAR RECITAL IS WELL RECEIVED
E. Harold Geer, organist of Vassar College, gave his 221th organ recital at the college Sunday night, playing three pieces by Balistreri, Bossa's "Colloquy with Swallows," and the Bach "Prelude and Fugue in E minor."
Balistreri's compositions, "Prelude on a Plain Song," "Elegy" and "Toccata-Prelude on the Plain Song" formed the largest part of the recital, although the Bach number prelude was perhaps the high spot of the organ music.
Little need be said of the Bach number, as it is familiar to all lovers of organ music and Mr. Geer played it with fluency and musicianship, bringing out the contrapuntal beauties to their best advantage.
Balistreri's prelude was made up of four parts, presenting the four sections of the plain song and in the "Toccata-Prelude" the music was worked out following the general outlines of a sonata.
The Bossa composition was one of three scenes from the life of St. Francis by the Italian composer.

Mantinband Discusses Lives Of Jackson and Lee in Address
The obliteration of all sectional differences between the North and South was advocated by Rabbi Charles Mantinband at the conclusion of a lecture, in the First Congregational Church Sunday night on the subject of "Two Eminent Virginians." Thomas J. "Stonewall" Jackson and Robert E. Lee.
"Both the South and the North," said the Rabbi, himself a Virginian by birth, "should forget what injustices have been done to either. The South should conform to the counsel of Lee, who, shortly before his death, wrote to the effect that since the Civil War had been decided against the South, she should make an effort to gain prestige in the sight of the North."
"Her statesmen, Lee had advised, should seek their offices under the stars and stripes and continue in harmony with their brothers of the North for the interests of the Union and the interests of the state are the same."
Rabbi Mantinband first took up Jackson and dwelled upon his religious nature. "Jackson," he said, "a man almost fanatic in his religious ardor, was a soldier by profession. He was a man who was religiously inclined almost to the extreme. Before his death he prayed, upon rising in the morning he prayed, upon retiring for the night he prayed his every glass of water he offered a prayer to Him."
"I always take a lesson from his last words after having been mortally wounded by a bullet from the gun of one of his own men. We read: 'Come, let us cross over the river and rest beneath the shade of the trees.'"
"In Robert Edward Lee we find an equally great character of the South. Lee, who could have been commander of the Union armies; Lee, who could, perhaps, have taken Grant's place and one day become the president of the United States; Lee, a graduate of West Point, schooled in the art of war in behalf of the defence of the United States, chose to fight for the South because of his love for his people."
"If Jackson was the puritan of the South, Lee was the cavalier of the South. 'How,' he said, when asked by Lincoln to command the Union forces, 'can I make up my mind to raise my hand against my children and my own?' And then, at the risk of being called a rebel and traitor he turned to the South and guided her armies through battle after battle with a skill equal to that of Napoleon and Caesar."
Rabbi Mantinband pointed out that Lee was the outstanding genius of the Civil War and many times defeated Grant. He afterward, the Rabbi concluded, refused to become the governor of Virginia and also refused many business offers to take up his duties as the president of Washington University at a yearly salary of $11,000. Five years later, upon his death, the name was changed to Washington and Lee University in his honor.

RABBI WISE SAYS FIGHT IS ENDED
New York, Jan. 10.—(A. P.)—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, whose recent sermon on the life of Jesus aroused a storm of criticism from many Jews, asserted today that so far as he was concerned, the controversy was ended. He promised, however, at some future time to take up the theme touched upon in that sermon in his own way and with freedom of thought.
Dr. Wise branded as distasteful the accusations of disloyalty to his faith because he had extended a friendly hand toward another religion. At the same time he declared that the proposal for a universal religion, advocated in some quarters on the strength of his views, was unthinkable and unworkable.
As chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, from which some of his opponents sought to depose him, Dr. Wise announced that a total of $1,593,730 had so far been contributed by American Jews toward the up-building of the Jewish homeland.

PADLOCK ORDERED FOR MONTREAL SHOP
Follows Issuance of Temporary Injunction; Attorney Rosen Represents Proprietor
Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morchauer ordered Saturday that the Montreal Mall and Hop store at 469 Main Street be padlocked for three months, after a hearing at which Michael Basilio, the proprietor of the store, was present with his attorney, Paul Rosen.
This action followed the issuance of a temporary injunction Wednesday, upon the service of a summons and complaint against Basilio, charging that he was operating his store as a common nuisance, in selling intoxicating liquors.
Mr. Rosen explained in court that his client would vacate the premises at 469 Main Street at once and said that Basilio had lost two legs in an accident of the West Shore Railroad several years ago and since then has been hard pressed to earn a living.
This is the first case of its kind in the history of the city and is expected to be the forerunner or similar cases against men who are found to be violating the Volstead act. The landlords of places where liquor is found to be sold, will also be joined in the actions and they are liable for the costs of the prosecution.

ICE CARNIVAL HELD AT VASSAR COLLEGE
Weather Man Is Unable To Refuse Students' Prayers and Sends Necessary Cold Spell
The Ice Carnival was held at Vassar College Saturday night after having been postponed for the last few years because of the lack of ice. Plans were made for this year's carnival with the fear in the heart of the students that it might be called off at the last minute at the last. But their prayers to the Weather Man were evidently heard although snow falling late Friday night almost ruined the plans.
The snow was cleared from Sunset Lake early Saturday and there was one of the biggest crowds in the history of the ice carnival, inasmuch as no student now at college could remember when one had been held.
There were four big bonfires and two strong spotlights, used for warmth and light for the skaters. An orchestra played during the evening and at 9 o'clock the grand march was held. Exhibition skating was shown under the spotlights by groups of skaters and by single fancy skaters.
Two college girls dressed as clowns sang and skated in time to their own music.
Hot dogs, coffee and doughnuts were served.

DEPOSITS INCREASE REPORTED BY BANKS
A survey made Saturday in four of the local banks declared that deposits for 1925 show an increase of $909,000 over the total for 1924. The heads of these banks, the Poughkeepsie Trust Company, the First National Bank, the Merchants' National Bank and the Poughkeepsie Savings Bank, have agreed that this is indicative of a normal prosperity.
This amount would be increased, they say, by several millions of dollars were the people of this city not investing in Florida real estate and various local enterprises.

FIRE DAMAGE IS ONLY SLIGHT
Little Delay Will Be Caused At Bearings Plant
LOSS ESTIMATED AT $2,000
Spontaneous Combustion Theory Is Held as Cause
Only a slight delay will be occasioned by the damage caused by the fire in the cleaning room of the Federal Bearing Company plant Saturday afternoon as steps have already been taken to replace the machinery which was partly destroyed. The damage is estimated at about $2,000.
The fire was caused, it is thought, by spontaneous combustion in the flue of a blowing machine. Twelve men were working in the room at the time and Augustus Howell was burned about the eyes by the first flare of fire. The automatic sprinkler was set in operation by the heat.
A general alarm was sounded and later a second alarm was turned in. Chief Christ W. Noll said after the fire that he gave no authority for the second alarm. The flames were extinguished by chemicals in less than an hour.

SUGGEST PUBLIC WATERING PLACE
Conservation Commission Planning To Convert Saratoga Springs Into European Spa
Albany, Jan. 10.—(A. P.)—A program for developing the state's mineral spring reservation at Saratoga Springs into a great public watering place that will have a combined hotel and sanitarium and other equipment of the famous spas of Europe, has been formulated by the conservation commission which has had jurisdiction over the property since 1915.
The cost of the suggested expansion which the commission says will give the people "the full benefit of the state's immensely valuable mineral water resources," is estimated at nearly $6,000,000.
Of this sum $250,000 would be used in completing the development of Lincoln Park so as to provide at least 3,500 mineral baths and four or five hundred special treatments daily.
Between $600,000 and $600,000 would be required for the acquisition of additional property in the city of Saratoga Springs and the construction thereon of a modern bath house and drink hall to care for the patronage heretofore accruing to the Saratoga Bath House, condemned last April. This appropriation would also cover buildings designed to facilitate the use of the springs by the public.
The next step would be the erection in Geysers Park of the hotel-sanitarium, directly connected with a bath house in which all forms of hydro-therapeutic treatments would be provided. It is also proposed to lay out tennis courts, an 18 hole golf course, club house and other recreational features. The cost of this part of the project would be about $5,900,000.
The plans also contemplate the proper landscaping of the entire reservation property consisting of High Rock Park, Lincoln Park and Geysers Park, nearly 700 acres in all.
Completion of the expansion would require several years.
