THE REV. JONATHAN BELL.

The newspaper man reported the matter to the health officer, and an investigation was started. It was learned that the body in the coffin had been embalmed two months before and kept in the undertaking shop all the time, being removed on three different occasions when Mr. Gibbs shifted his quarters.

The death certificate showed that the girl had died just two months before; the name on the death certificate was Myrtle Cook, the cause of death was set down as pneumonia, and the doctor who signed the certificate was Dr. J. H. Baker.

When Gibbs found the case had been reported he hurried to bury the body in Potter's field. The health officer ordered it dug up, and it was laid on a slab in another undertaking establishment.

It was more than a nine days' sensation, owing to the peculiar circumstances which surrounded the case. Prosecutor Frazer was afterward visited by a woman, who told him a remarkable story.

She said that she had been an inmate of the Lane lytic hospital in January and there met a girl named Myrtle Cook, who had been driven down to Detroit January 23d, and went down to Mrs. Lane's hospital. He also learned that all arrangements had been made for her coming to Syracuse.

Then Frazer had the body re-examined, and when this strange information, now known to be Jennie Wilson, passed on the features, she said: "That is Emily Hall, but these are not her clothes."

His further investigation developed the fact that Emily Hall had frequently talked to his informant about her parents, and she was well known to him.

With this much of a clue, the prosecutor and chief of detectives went to work. They established the fact that she had received a letter which was headed "Primrose Villa, Station Road, Dudley, England," and was signed "John."

He also established the fact that on February 6th, a registered letter was received in Detroit addressed to Mrs. H. D. Lane, No. 630 Lincoln avenue, which contained $500 for the price for the work.

The detective and prosecutor have secured the evidence of two persons, one of whom swears that Emily Hall told her that she had been wronged by a man who was a clergyman, and the other makes an affidavit that she had been wronged by a clergyman of the name of Bell.

tabulated beyond doubt the identity of the poor girl who had been buried in Potter's field. He also established the fact that she was the loved daughter of a Birmingham family, and was unduly loved by this Church of England clergyman.

A cabman was sent to Birmingham last Saturday night asking the officers there to watch the high church clergyman of Birmingham. It was soon made known that the suspected man was the Rev. Jonathan Bell of Primrose Villa, Black Heath, Birmingham, England, who has been identified as having been in St. Clair. He is the brother-in-law of the Rev. William Jones, of that place, and is a Methodist circuit preacher.

Mr. Frazer, visited St. Clair about the middle of November last and left January 1st for England, whence he returned after a few days, and attended his father's funeral. This visit had been planned for a long time. He had written Mr. Frazer over a year ago about coming to see him for the purpose of a rest. Mr. Bell, however, found it difficult, and added that his American trip might do him good.

That Bell is the same man spoken of by Emily Hall as her betrayer in her confession to Jennie Wilson at Mrs. Lane's lying-in hospital, has been thoroughly established, as has been the fact that the same man who wrote the instructions which guided unfortunate Emily Hall to the home of Mrs. Lane in England to the hospital of Mrs. Lane in Detroit to become the victim of a criminal operation, wrote an address on an envelope for the widow of a college professor in St. Clair, Michigan, in December. This bit of handwriting seems to establish the identity of the Rev. Jonathan Bell as the man who arranged for the treatment of Emily Hall.

How Emma Left Home. A few days before Christmas Emma said she thought she would go to Calton Hill, which is in the Leeds district, to spend the holidays with some friends. Her parents did not think anything about this, although they had all along supposed that she was going to spend the holidays at home.

Nothing had been said to that effect, but she had been interested in some of the other girls in an entertainment that was to be given at the church and they supposed that she would stay for that. She left two days after that, and on the day she left home her mother got a letter from her, saying she had been engaged as a lady's companion and was going on a long trip abroad. She did not say where she was going, and her parents never heard.

Bell has now disappeared. It is said, from England, and what the end of the case will be none can foretell. The checking evidence against him was made public yesterday when it became known through his wife that he had confessed to her that he betrayed Emma Hall while she was acting as a nurse, and that Mrs. Bell had found a nurse's pocket letter which she found in Bell's desk. It is from Emma Hall and promises never to expose him and forgive him for getting her in trouble.

Another letter from Emma to a cousin in a pitiful acknowledgment of her fall but does not name Bell as the betrayer.

Mrs. Bell thinks the guilty pastor has committed suicide, but search for him is still being prosecuted. For a perfect health you must have pure blood, and the best way to have pure blood is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla.
