TO IMPROVE OUR ECONOMIC STATUS.

In the nationwide effort to improve the economic status of the American workers, it is only fair that the Negro workers should have their claims for recognition.

Mr. Deming's productions were ambitious and creditable, being limited to one opera a year.

PROHIBITION AND TEMPERANCE.

The prohibition act, which has been in effect for nearly a year, has brought about a decrease in the number of deaths from alcoholism. However, it is still too early to tell whether the act will be effective in reducing the number of alcoholics.

The Washington Tribune did not share this optimism, as it is entirely overlooked. The interests of both labor and the public are affected by the act, whereas its effect on the Negro population is minimal.

The interests of the Negro under the National Industrial Recovery Act would be fully protected by the establishment of codes and plans. The Negro worker is a vital part of the labor force and his participation in the act is necessary for the success of the enterprise.

When a report filed by Mr. McLean on a recent visit to the city was presented to the committee of three, he stated that the opium traffic is already crumbling under the onslaught of 12,000 jobs, and with the legitimate labor force in the city, this is another factor that should be considered in the employment of the Negro worker.

Mr. McLean expects that the Eighteenth amendment will be repealed by December. He stated that the Negro worker should be represented in the consideration of the bill, and that this is the only way to protect the Negro from the evils of prohibition.

The interests of the Negro are best protected by the establishment of codes and plans. The Negro worker is a vital part of the labor force, and his participation in the act is necessary for the success of the enterprise.

The Washington Tribune did not share this optimism, as it is entirely overlooked. The interests of both labor and the public are affected by the act, whereas its effect on the Negro population is minimal.

The interests of the Negro under the National Industrial Recovery Act would be fully protected by the establishment of codes and plans. The Negro worker is a vital part of the labor force and his participation in the act is necessary for the success of the enterprise.

THE Virgin Isles

By James A. Burnham

PORTO RICAN IMMIGRATION INTO THE Virgin Isles.

In the Virgin Islands, many Porto Ricans have come in recent years to take advantage of the opportunities for work. The United States government has been promoting the immigration of Porto Ricans here as a means of providing employment and improving the economy.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.

The government has been working closely with the Porto Rican government to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

The immigrants are provided with housing, education, and medical care, and are encouraged to participate in the local economy. The government has also been working to ensure that the immigrants are treated fairly and that their rights are protected.

In addition to providing employment opportunities, the immigration of Porto Ricans has helped to rejuvenate the local economy. Many of the immigrants have started businesses, and the government has been working to support these enterprises.