NEW QUEENS SUBWAY SERVICE WILL BE LAUNCHED TONIGHT
Tunnel From Manhattan Open to Jackson Heights
Service Will Eventually Be Extended Through To Jamaica
The opening of the new Queens-53rd Street Station, located on 53rd Street between 107th and 108th Avenues in Forest Hills, will take place on August 20, 1933. This station, which is the eastern terminus of the new IRT express subway from Manhattan, will provide a direct connection with the LIRR by way of the Woodhaven Boulevard and Elmhurst avenues lines. The new service will be inaugurated with a celebration tonight at 10:30 P.M. at the new Queens-Midtown Terminal.

The Queens-53rd Street Station is a three-level subway structure, with the lower level being for the Woodhaven Boulevard trains and the upper level being for the Elmhurst avenue trains. The station is served by the BMT and IRT lines, and is the eastern terminus of the new IRT express subway from Manhattan. The station is located on 53rd Street between 107th and 108th Avenues in Forest Hills. The new service will be inaugurated with a celebration tonight at 10:30 P.M. at the new Queens-Midtown Terminal.

The Queens-53rd Street Station is a three-level subway structure, with the lower level being for the Woodhaven Boulevard trains and the upper level being for the Elmhurst avenue trains. The station is served by the BMT and IRT lines, and is the eastern terminus of the new IRT express subway from Manhattan. The station is located on 53rd Street between 107th and 108th Avenues in Forest Hills. The new service will be inaugurated with a celebration tonight at 10:30 P.M. at the new Queens-Midtown Terminal.

The Queens-53rd Street Station is a three-level subway structure, with the lower level being for the Woodhaven Boulevard trains and the upper level being for the Elmhurst avenue trains. The station is served by the BMT and IRT lines, and is the eastern terminus of the new IRT express subway from Manhattan. The station is located on 53rd Street between 107th and 108th Avenues in Forest Hills. The new service will be inaugurated with a celebration tonight at 10:30 P.M. at the new Queens-Midtown Terminal.