4 More Soldiers Killed; 10 Wounded on Western Front

[Continued from Page One]

In August, 1944, a 3rd Army radio station was reported to be in the vicinity of Stalins, but the radio station was later moved to the area of the 3rd Army's front line, via the Russian air force. In the past year with the 99th Air Force, he was also a part of the 99th Air Force, and his last mission was to deliver mail to the 99th Air Force, where he was killed in action.

Sergeant Fred E. Murphy, Jr., of the 99th Air Force, was killed in action on November 15, 1944, while on a mission in the vicinity of Stalins. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy, were informed at their home in Jamaica, that their son was killed in action.

Sergeant William J. Sullivan, of the 99th Air Force, was killed in action on November 15, 1944, while on a mission in the vicinity of Stalins. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan, were informed at their home in Jamaica, that their son was killed in action.

Sergeant John J. O'Donnell, of the 99th Air Force, was killed in action on November 15, 1944, while on a mission in the vicinity of Stalins. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, were informed at their home in Jamaica, that their son was killed in action.

Sergeant Anthony Abruzzi, of the 99th Air Force, was killed in action on November 15, 1944, while on a mission in the vicinity of Stalins. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Abruzzi, were informed at their home in Jamaica, that their son was killed in action.

The parents of the four soldiers that were killed, were informed of the death of their sons, by the United States Army, via a letter, written on February 14, 1945.