Thrillers All Right On Screen, But Real Life Mystery Disturbs Wife Of Author

Mrs. Ben Hatch, wife of the well-known motion picture actor, was yesterday notified that her husband was under arrest in New York City for playing a role in the East Side Murders. Mrs. Hatch, who is an actress herself, found out about the situation when she was called to the telephone by the New York City Police Department. She said she was shocked at the news and was not sure what to do.

"I don't know if I should go to him or not," she said. "I just know I'm not going to leave him alone for a moment if I can help it."

The East Side Murders, which have baffled the police for months, were solved by a new technique that required the cooperation of the actor and the police. The technique involved using the actor's skill to impersonate suspects and gain their trust.

"I don't know how they did it," said Mrs. Hatch. "But I'm glad they did."

AUTO IS WRECKED, BUT NOBODY'S HURT

Refusal To Pay Cabby Brings Fine

Refusal to pay $4.50 fine was the result of a court case in which a cab driver was charged with assault. According to the cab driver, he was attacked by a passenger who refused to pay for the ride. The cab driver said he was left with no choice but to hit the passenger to protect himself.

ST. TERESA'S FAIR DRAWING CROWDS

A Drawing

"It was a drawing for the entire school," said the principal. "We had a total of 1000 people at the event, and we had $2000 in prizes." The principal said the money raised will go towards the purchase of new textbooks for the school.

In a recent letter to Mr. FITZ, Mrs. S. G. wrote: "Sanitation trucks para our house late at night and early in the morning, going to and from the garage. The noise disturbs the sleep of our entire block. There is no good road a few blocks away on which there are no houses. Would it be possible to have the trucks use this road instead?"

Mr. FITZ came to work. He notified the proper authorities. With a few degrees, Mr. FITZ said to Mr. S. G. that the Department of Sanitation had ordered the immediate removal of the trucks to the road suggested. Now all is well with the S. G.'s.
