ROOSEVELT WITH HUGUES

Chief Roosevelt, knowing that the moment of your coming into the White House would be the re-election of Wilis, who before he assailed the republic was a Republican is necessary for the reversion of the country to its former condition.

On August 2, 1914, the Republican National Convention met in Chicago to decide on the form of party platform, and the delegates of that party, who had been organized in 1856 and had been the dominant party in the United States for almost 70 years, adopted a platform which called for the election of a trying to the country.

The platform of the Republican Party, as adopted at the Convention, was as follows:

"The Platform for the election of 1914, the Republican Party, in accordance with the wishes of the Convention, subjects the platform to the electorate for its consideration and support."

The platform calls for the re-election of President Woodrow Wilson, and for the election of a new Congress, which shall be free from the influence of the party which has controlled the government during the past ten years.

The platform also calls for the enactment of a better law for the protection of the country from the evils of foreign intrigue and the meeting of Congress on the 3d of March next, and the sending of a bill for the consideration of Congress, which shall provide for the prompt and efficient execution of the laws of the land."