In Greek forces of the 32nd Division and the 11th Lancers, who were stationed near Kiusura, on the line of communication to the Greek army in Albania, a field artillery battery was captured, along with a supply of ammunition and four guns. The German command had expected the Greek army to attack the Albanian front on the following day, but the Greek army had not been heard from for two days, the report said.

The Greek air force had been operating from bases in the Greek island of Crete, and had been bombing targets in Crete, including the German airfield at Kiusura.
