"The New Woman" by Frederick Douglass

"...I would be exactly in the spot where the bullet, which had fallen to the ground, would have passed."

"...and I clapped my hands to my right eye..."

"...we didn't make any noise..."

"...No shot had been heard..."

"...and spinning yarns to pass away an idle moment..."

"...Mrs. Wiggles (sobbing)..."

"...Horatius was holding the bridge..."

"...the young woman turned upon him..."

"...The number of bluefish taken off the Jersey and Long Island coasts during the last summer is a calculation that emphasizes not only the destructive power of this species, but also the number of miles of ocean that it may live in..."

"...the wayfarer to lay aside his cloak..."
