By MARGARET BRENNING

The Grand Central Palace is an overwhelming in interest to American artists and enthusiasts of Russian art. The exhibition, which is open to the public from March 15 to April 15, features a wide range of works by Russian artists, from the early 19th century to the present day.

The exhibition is divided into several sections, each focusing on a different aspect of Russian life and culture. Visitors can expect to see paintings, sculptures, drawings, and photographs, as well as manuscripts and decorative arts.

Among the highlights of the exhibition are works by such well-known artists as Marc Chagall, Kazimir Malevich, and Vasily Kandinsky. The exhibition also includes a large number of contemporary works by Russian artists, many of whom are still living in their native country.

The exhibition is not only a showcase for the artistic achievements of Russia, but also a tribute to the country’s rich cultural heritage. Visitors will have the opportunity to learn about Russian history, literature, and music, as well as the country’s unique customs and traditions.

The exhibition is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, and admission is free. For more information, please visit the website of the Grand Central Palace or call (212) 366-1000.
