U.S. readying anti-satellite laser

New York (A.P.) — The Pentagon plans to ready an anti-satellite weapon this year to be used in orbit and is preparing for a test of the laser, according to a report published in the New York Times.

The proposal could spark controversy, because some critics of Congress and the administration are concerned about the development of anti-satellite technology on the ground that it could lead to a new arms race.

The laser, named Mark II, was designed to destroy satellites in orbit and was tested at the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. But the laser's development was suspended last year, when it became clear that the weapon was in an advanced state of development.
