MINIMIZE PERILS OF DASH TO MEXICO CITY

REFUGEES GIVING UNCLE SAM CONCERN

O

ONE of the many things that led to the decision of the United States government to send troops to Vera Cruz was the news of the expected invasion of Mexico. The issue of the war was of vital importance to the United States, and the news of the intended invasion of the United States was a threat to its national security.

While American forces occupied Vera Cruz, the United States troops were engaged in the construction of a railroad from Vera Cruz to the United States. This railroad was intended to provide a means of communication between the United States and the United States, and to facilitate the movement of troops and supplies. The railroad was built by the American company, and was completed in 1847.

VERA CRUZ PRISON RELIC OF DARK AGES

M

MOST famous of all Mexico's prisons, noted for its sad record and its history of cruelty, were the prisons of Mexico's Cortes and the prisons of Vera Cruz.

In 1846 the United States began the construction of the railroad from Vera Cruz to the United States. In 1847 the railroad was completed, and the United States troops began to move into Mexico. The United States troops were commanded by General Scott, and the United States troops were commanded by General Scott.

The news of the capture of Vera Cruz led to the decision of the United States government to send troops to Vera Cruz. The United States government was determined to prevent the United States from being invaded by Mexico.

The above data was obtained from the American Press Association.